Royal Worcester Kidfitting Corsets

No. 800, 21/9. No. 829, 16/11. No. 579, 12/6.

Since the makers of Royal Worcester Corsets first introduced the natural form they have consistently added new inventions in new models for the comfort or protection of the wearers. Take for instance the new non-pinching clasp which was invented and patented by the Royal Worcester Corset Company, and will only be found on their 1919 models. It does not pinch. It does not break. It does not twist. It does not tear underwear, it always stays flat, and it is easily adjusted. There has been a great shortage of these corsets, so ladies are strongly advised to select their new model immediately.

SPORTING NEWS.

BALDOYLE MEETING—SATURDAY.

PACIFIST WINS METROPOLITAN PLATE.

The delightful weather on Saturday induced a big company to Baldoyle, where an excellent afternoon's racing was provided. The programme was of the mixed order, and again the popularity of steeplechasing was made apparent by the success of the Metropolitan Plate, which furnished a most interesting race. Though not faring so well as on some recent occasions, backers once more had the better of the argument with the layers, four of the six races falling to favourites, and the Metropolitan Plate winner, Pacifist, who started equal favourite with Kilnford, was very popular.

Empire Maker, who had finished second in his two previous races, went one better in the Saturday Plate, which he won very easily from Cellar Glen and the favourite, Lyric, who never looked like justifying his market status. Mr. Parkinson ran both Gamble and Sweet Bee in the Seaside Selling T.Y.O. Plate, and made a declaration in favour of the first-named, on whom odds of 2 to 1 were laid and these were landed without any appreciable effort, but he did not command a bid when put up to auction. Murmansk, who had finished close up with Orpi and Princess Symons colt at Phœnix Park a week previously, opened and remained in most demand for the Sheilmartin Plate, and another to be heavily supported was Compliment. She ran well for four furlongs, but in the end was beaten out of the first three, and Murmansk, who commanded the situation throughout, scored in very easy fashion. He is one of the first of the produce of Louvois to run, and, a good-looking colt, he should do further useful service for Capt. Shirley, who served with distinction in the war. Waterford Glass, who left off an odds on chance for the May Plate, cut up in disappointing fashion, and never got within striking distance of Granard and Voxol, who were in the van throughout, the first-named, who, it will be remembered, ran up to Golden Fleece in the Scurrys at the Curragh, prevailing by half a length.

The Metropolitan Plate, like the other big steeplechases run during the winter, proved a most attractive race. The field of nineteen runners did not include Golden Fleece, whose Leopardstown win brought his weight in this race up to 13st. 9lb., but Pacifist and Cargo, second and third at Leopardstown, were amongst the field, and the former and Kilnford shared favouritism. Cargo was also well supported, as were Lie Low, Darthogue, and Royal Field. The race was run at a nice pace, Cargo again filling the rôle of pacemaker, a position he maintained until about half a mile from home, when Darthogue joined issue, and Pacifist drew into third place. The last-named quickly overhauled the leading pair on the flat, and won in easy style from Cargo and Darthogue, thus confirming the Leopardstown running, and further enhancing the achievement of Golden Fleece on that occasion. Lie Low fell after going half the journey, and at the same stage Kilnford bolted, while Thomond, who was going well at the time, came to grief a mile from home. The Coolock Plate, a three miles steeplechase, which brought the afternoon's sport to a close, fell an easy prey to Lancehead, who, though last of the four horses still standing coming to the final fence, passed one after the other in the straight, and won in a canter. Cargo settled down in front of King's Carol, Fond Lucy, Thomond, and Barmecide, with Darthogue and Pacifist next and Picture Saint and Llangollen the last pair. Royal Field was pulled up after a mile, and at half-way Lie Low fell and Kilnford bolted. Cargo continued to make the running, followed by Thomond, Darthogue, Pacifist, Barmecide, and Fond Lucy. A mile from home Thomond fell, and a little further on Darthogue drew up to Cargo, while Pacifist took closer order with the leaders. After jumping the last fence Pacifist raced past the leading pair, and drawing clear away, won easily by ten lengths; eight lengths divided second and third. HURST PARK MEETING—SATURDAY.

(SPECIAL TELEGRAM.)

LONDON, Saturday Night.

If the attendance at Hurst Park this afternoon was an excellent one, it appeared quite moderate in comparison with the big crowd which rendered the Easter Monday visit somewhat uncomfortable. The racing was not quite up to the customary standard here, and once more the fact is noted that a selling plate failed to furnish a race. The ground was in splendid condition, thanks to a heavy shower during the early morning. The field for the Victoria Cup failed to reach double figures, and it transpired that Irish Elegance was eliminated during the previous afternoon after the card had been printed. Diadem was always the best favourite, but Grand Fleet was also substantially supported. This good-looking horse was not, however, in luck's way as he became badly placed at a critical period of the race; while Arion, too, was partially shut in, but the latter would hardly have won in any case. Diadem was a trifle over-weighted, but ran well for more than six furlongs. Carados made practically the whole of the running, and fully justified his character of being one of the best two-year-olds in Ireland a couple of years ago. Grand Fleet put in a splendid effort when he got a clear run, but it came too late. Details:—

At the start Carados drew to the front, with Earna, Golly Eyes, Grand Fleet, and Diadem in close attendance. They ran in that order for about half way, when Earna dropped behind, Golly Eyes becoming second. Diadem and Grand Fleet pressed hard towards the finish, but Carados held them off and won by a length; a head between second and third. SYNOD WEEK

Switzers have prepared for the extra pressure which they always experience during Synod Week. After 60 years of Clerical Tailoring and Outfitting, their experience and intimate knowledge of Clerical requirements has created a confidence in their work which is evidenced by an ever-increasing clientele. Your visit this week may prove an economical one, for the difficulty of obtaining reliable materials is not likely to be less acute in the near future. At present we have comprehensive though small stocks.

LEWES, Sunday Night.

There is every prospect of a good meeting at Lewes to-morrow and Tuesday. A fairly good arrival list can be materially swelled in the morning from Epsom, Rottingdean, Findon, and other training quarters. For the Three-Year-Old Handicap, Happy Man, Sabian, and Rusher hold chances, but as Happy Man has not yet arrived I shall give Sabian the preference. Sir E. Hulton may also win the Abergavenny Stakes with his good filly Saffian, and only in her absence should I turn to Throsga gelding. My selections are:—Beacon Handicap—Mr. Bottomley's selected. Maiden Plate—Duncan. Three-Year-Old Handicap—Sabian. Abergavenny Stakes—Saffian; if absent, Throsga gelding. Moderate Plate—Bergleuse; if absent, Landorf. CRICKET.

County Trial Match at the Oval.

Cricket, after a lapse of four seasons, was resumed at The Oval on Saturday, when the County trial match was played. The sides were captained by F. T. Badcock and Lieutenant Hayes, the latter of whom now plays as an amateur. Badcock's side batted first, Hobbs and Sandham going in to the bowling of Rushby and Freeman. The innings realised 306, Hobbs compiling 106 in an hour and ten minutes. He hit eighteen 4's. Sandham likewise played fine cricket for 81, reaching his first 50 in an hour and 45 minutes. Hayes' side were all out for 168, and going in a second time they lost one wicket for 44. Score:—

Leinster Cricket Union.

Cricket under the auspices of the new Union was started on Saturday, when two Senior League matches were played. Leinster defeated University College at Rathmines, while Civil Service accounted for the R.H.M.S. on the latter's ground.

Leinster Senior League
Leinster v. University College.

The visitors, batting first, made a poor show, all being out in about an hour and a half for 47. The wicket was on the slow side, and Lambert, bowling in quite his old form, captured six wickets for 12 runs; while Edwards had three for 23. Skelding, who has been one of the principal Leicester fast bowlers, after bowling three overs strained a sinew, and could not take any further part in the game. Leinster had won with nine wickets in hand, and all were out for 166, the scoring being very consistent, seven of the side reaching double figures. Score:—

The scoring was very low at the Hibernian ground, twenty wickets falling for 121 runs. Service, batting first, were all out for 74, of which Buxton played well for 32, which included six boundaries. The home side made a very poor show against the bowling of Binnie (five for 19) and Murphy (five for 23), M'Donnell, the last man in, being the only one to reach double figures. Score:—

A.I.P.C. Opening Practice.

After a lapse of nearly four years, play was resumed by the All-Ireland Club on Saturday, when a general practice was held on the Nine Acres. The weather was beautifully fine, and a large gathering of spectators gave the enclosure something of an old-time appearance. Nine chukkers were played, and, with the ground in good order, some capital gallops were witnessed.

The following took part:—Captain Beech, Mr. A. Balding, Mr. J. Butler, Mrs. T. P. Tyrrell, Captain H. Daly, Captain Goulding, Mr. J. J. Durack, Captain S. Watt (Kildare), Mr. Wilfrid Fitzgerald, Mr. T. I. Roark (Carlow), Mr. C. W. Brindley, and Mr. J. A. B. Trench.

All-Ireland Club.—The ground will be open for play on Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays in each week. Practice at 3.30 to-morrow (Tuesday), 13th.

Our portrait is of Mrs. Benham, of 29 Brynhyfryd, Penydarren, Merthyr Tydfil, Wales, who writes:—

"I suffered for six months with a terrible ulcerated wound in my knee about two inches in depth. I was attended to by doctors, and had a nurse, but did not get well. The doctors thought I had a diseased bone, so I had an operation, having a piece taken away from my knee about the size of a five-shilling piece, but still did not improve. Hearing so much about 'Clarke's Blood Mixture,' I at last resolved to give it a trial, and after a few days the improvement in my knee was great. The first bottle eased my pain, and by the time I had taken a few bottles (three, I believe) my knee was completely cured."

Abscesses, Ulcers, Bad Legs, Glandular Swellings, Eczema, Boils, Pimples, Sores and Eruptions, Piles, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Gout, are all sure signs of clogging blood impurity, calling for immediate treatment through the blood (outward application is of little use). For cleansing the blood of the impurities there is no other remedy just as good as Clarke's Blood Mixture. Pleasant to take, and free from anything injurious. Ask for and see that you get

The War of Words.

Throughout the world the great instrument of Peace is being discussed, welcomed, criticised and decried. Allied and American opinion is, in the main, favourable. German opinion, naturally enough, is not only loud, but hysterical, in its expression of disappointment and "disillusionment." It occupies itself largely with speculations and suggestions as to the attitude of Count Brockdorff-Rantzau and his colleagues, and its tendency seems to be fairly divided between unconditional rejection on the one hand and deceptive acceptance on the other. All through the German Press runs an undercurrent of hysterical abandon, which sways the mind of the people and hinders the progress of a reasoned view. Even Herr Theodor Wolff, of the Berliner Tageblatt, a man noted for his moderate views, cannot decide whether it would be wiser to refuse the terms without further parley, or to accept them, through the medium of an Independent Socialist (quasi-Bolshevist) Government, in the hope; which inspired Trotsky at Brest-Litovsk, that a "world revolution" in a few years will annul any such agreement. He never even contemplates a genuine acceptance. "It is a mistake," writes Herr Haase, one of the Kaiser's former bêtes noires, "to think of the consequences, for there is nothing more fearful than this peace." This opinion appears to dominate all others. Every grade of German society, from the Junkers to the Bolshevists, seems to urge the rejection of the terms, either by a blunt refusal to sign or by the more subtle method of signing first in order to evade the stringencies of blockade, and then refusing to fulfil the various obligations at leisure. This latter course commends itself—by its simplicity, no doubt—to no less august a personage than the Reverend Doctor Otto Baumgarten, Professor of Practical Theology at Kiel. Why not another "scrap of paper"? In her theology, as in everything else, Germany is eminently practical.

Count Brockdorff-Rantzau has opened the final offensive with two Notes to M. Clemenceau, which suggest, at any rate, that the Germans intend to take full advantage of the liberty of written comment which has been permitted by the Allies. The former of these two Notes contains four items of information. The Germans have read the Treaty; they do not consider it a Peace of Right such as has been agreed upon; promises given to Germany and to the world at large have been ignored; and, finally, demands have been made which not only could be borne by no country, but are not capable of accomplishment. The Note ends with a statement that the Allies will be kept well supplied with observations and material. This Note serves as a fair guide to the direction which German opposition to the Peace Treaty is likely to take. President Wilson's Fourteen Points will be summoned as witnesses that Germany has been betrayed. Germany is said to be preparing a draft of a "real" Peace of Right, drawn up in rigid adherence to Wilsonian maxims, and intended to canonise its potential signatories. This treaty will be presented solemnly to the Allied delegates at Versailles, and appeals will be made to the sense of fair-play of the British, and the "idealism" of the American, democracies. In this way the Germans probably hope that their adversaries may be persuaded or urged to modify their terms. If such be their hope, possibly M. Clemenceau's sharp reply to Count Brockdorff-Rantzau's Note may help to disillusionise them. They must confine their communications to suggestions of a practical nature, and no discussion of the Allies' right to insist upon the terms which they have formulated will be allowed. It was clear from the start that the Germans would try to improve their position and bring about as many modifications of the terms as possible. That they should begin, however, by challenging the Allies' interpretation of the Fourteen Points, especially as their inventor has assisted in the formulation of the Peace Terms, is, to say the least, unwise.

Count Brockdorff-Rantzau's second Note concerns the League of Nations. In a speech made by Professor Schücking a few days ago six objections were raised to the Covenant as it appears in the Treaty of Peace. These objections are embodied in the programme which the German delegation now has handed to M. Clemenceau. Germany objects to being excluded from membership of the League until such time as the Allies see fit to allow her to join; she considers that the Pope should be a member; she objects to Geneva as the seat of the League, and suggests The Hague as the alternative; she regards the "mandatory system" as annexation in disguise; she wants the question of the "freedom of the seas" to be raised, and, finally, suggests that international measures shall be taken to hold the Press in check, and prevent campaigns likely to cause friction between the nations. These are Professor Schücking's six points. Count Brockdorff-Rantzau, further, does not think that Germany should be asked to sign the Covenant before she is admitted to membership of the League, and wants to know if, and when, she is likely to receive an invitation. The most important point raised by this document is, of course, the question of the "freedom of the seas." Here again a covert appeal is being made to America. If Germany can possibly sow dissension among the Allies, she will do so, and it is their task to see that she is foiled. All the signs of the past three or four days point to the probability that she will first exhaust all the means at her control of trying to embarrass and confuse those whose orders she must obey, will make a bold effort to gain the sympathies of the Allied democracies by preaching conciliation and fair play, and, finally, when these attempts have proved useless, will sign the terms, and as soon as peace has been declared, begin once again her campaign of trickery. The inevitable result of the bad impression which Germany's reception of the peace terms has created will be a universal demand for further guarantees against any attempt on her part to evade their fulfilment. If her delegates are not very careful, they may find that an exasperated public opinion in the Allied countries will be even more difficult to placate than those who have drafted the Treaty of Peace.

Afghan Unrest.

During the past few days disquieting news has been received from India. Afghan regular troops have crossed the Indo-Afghan border line near the Khyber Pass, and other military movements towards the frontier are reported. Two strong mobile columns, under the command of Sir Arthur Barnett, have been sent forward to expel the intruders; and the Viceroy has addressed a letter of protest to the Ameer, Amanullah Khan, in which he calls upon him to keep his subjects in restraint and to explain why our frontier has been violated. The Ameer may plead that the incident occurred without his knowledge and against his wishes, and it may close with his expression of regret and a promise that condign punishment shall be meted out to the offenders. Twice before during the past quarter of a century, when there was similar trouble, the reigning Ameer took that course. On the present occasion, however, the report that "other Afghan troops are moving up towards the border" must be regarded as a matter of special significance. It is pointed out in a semi-official statement that these incidents must be taken in conjunction with the general state of unrest in the Moslem world. Undoubtedly, Turkish intrigue is at the bottom of the trouble. During the war Turkish agents made tremendous efforts to induce the late Ameer Habibullah to renounce his obligations to Great Britain and to throw in his lot with the Central Allies. They did not succeed. In all probability Habibullah's assassination was due to his strong leaning towards the Allies. His son Amanullah has developed strong pro-Turkish tendencies. Since his accession he has made a Turk his Minister for War, and has appointed his father-in-law, the editor of an extreme pro-Turkish newspaper, to be his Foreign Minister. Moreover, he has deported the three Englishmen who were formerly in his employment. As a prelude to military operations in India these matters are significant. The gravity of the situation which has arisen will depend to a great extent upon the effect which the violation of our frontier has upon the internal condition of India. Fortunately, the latest news is of a reassuring nature. The reports from the Punjab are especially encouraging. No disturbance has taken place there for some time, and the agitators appear to have lost their influence over the people. The border-land tribes, too, are observing the peace. Opinion in India is inclined to attribute the affair more to the Ameer's desire to cause a diversion in order to strengthen his position on the throne than to the adoption of an unfriendly policy towards Great Britain. That may be so. It must not be forgotten, however, that one of the Ameer's first declarations was that he would make Afghanistan "internally and externally independent and free." He may hope to fulfil his ambition by quarrelling with the British Government.

The Middle Classes.

We print a summary to-day of a manifesto which the Irish Labour Party and Trade Union Congress have addressed to "the employers of labour and property-owners in Ireland." It proves chiefly that the economic education of our working classes is still in the elementary stage. They have an acute sense of grievance and a growing sense of power. All wages "must be raised to a point that will more than equal the increase in the cost of living." The manifesto, however, does not suggest how this reform is to be achieved—"it is not our duty to propound a remedy." It does not admit that co-operation and good-will among all classes are essential to national prosperity. It does not contain a solitary hint of recognition that the employers' power to pay higher wages depends on larger production by the worker. It simply puts a pistol in his face and says, "You fail at your peril!" If this be the real policy of Irish Labour, we are threatened at no remote date with a general breakdown of industry. It will cease to pay its way, and then there will be no wages for anybody. The outlook would be truly alarming if we had not some reason to believe that the working-man's intelligence gets inadequate justice from his leaders' rhetoric. The most urgent moral of this manifesto is to be drawn from its complete disregard of the interests of the middle classes. Labour is not singular in this respect, for Capital also ignores the middle classes. A strike is declared; it is settled by the grant of higher wages to Labour; and Capital, with the connivance of Labour, transfers the increased charge to the most helpless, because the least organised, class in the community. In fact, the middle classes—the nation's best brain-workers—are now threatened with extinction, as under the later Emperors of Rome, by a tacit combination of Labour and Capital. The only shield against this danger is organisation, and the fact is beginning to be realised in Great Britain. A Middle Classes Union has been started in England. It is advertising itself copiously in the daily Press, and is getting a very large measure of support. It intends to teach the middle classes their own power—"to confront the economic facts of the monopoly of Capital and the monopoly of Labour with the economic fact of the monopoly of managerial ability." It proposes to create an organised and educated public opinion which Governments will be compelled to respect, as they now respect the trade unions and the employers' federations. There is much need for strong branches of this Middle Classes Union in Ireland, and we hope that they will be established without delay. If they are put on a proper footing during the present year, their candidates should be able to win many seats—under the system of proportional representation—at the next municipal elections. That reform gives our educated middle classes in Dublin and other cities an opportunity which they should be swift and resolute to seize.

ANTI-BRITISH FEELING IN AMERICA.

WORK OF IRISH AGITATORS.

Lord Reading, with Lady Reading, landed at Plymouth on Saturday from the Cunard liner Aquitania. Discussing the peace terms, Lord Reading said:—"I do not think the Germans had any right to expect anything less. They must have known perfectly well when they laid down their arms as a vanquished people that they must submit to the terms that a just victor would claim. The Germans could hardly expect to be received into the bosoms of our families."

On his attention being directed to the attitude of the Germans towards the Treaty and their contention that it went beyond President Wilson's 14 points, Lord Reading said—"The best answer to that is the fact that President Wilson has accepted the proposals embodied in the Treaty. The author of the 14 points is the best interpreter of them, and he has accepted the Treaty."

Asked about his impressions of the feeling existing in the United States, Lord Reading said America was very anxious to get back to pre-war conditions, and was doing its best to speed up the resumption of trade and industrial activities.

Irish agitation has been the main cause of anti-British feeling in America, declared Lord Reading. During the war it was quiescent, but as soon as hostilities ceased it again became evident, and it has undoubtedly increased in intensity. It would be folly, he continued, not to recognise this fact, but at the same time it must be recognised that the vast majority of the American people, by getting to know us better, have a deeper feeling for the British than ever before in our time.

The date upon which Lord Reading will resume judicial work is undecided at present. It is probable that he will have occasion to visit Paris during the next few days.

LORD FRENCH AND THE AISNE.

Chapter 7 of Field-Marshal Viscount French's Book, "1914," which deals with the battle of the Aisne, and its progress up to September 30, appeared in Saturday's edition of the Daily Telegraph. "In the first few days of this period of the war," he writes, "we were decidedly encouraged by reports from other theatres . . . However, we were destined to undergo another terrible disappointment. The lessons of war as it is to-day had to be rubbed in by another dearly-bought experience, and in a hard and bitter school. The first surprise came when the 'Jack Johnsons' began to fall. This was a nickname given by the men. The 'Black Marias' was another to a high explosive shell fired from 8in. howitzers, which had been brought from the fortress of Maubeuge to support the German defensive position on the Aisne. This drastic process of education went steadily on, but still reports came periodically from our aircraft, from our trenches, and from the French on either flank that the enemy in front of us was 'weakening,' that (phantom) columns had been seen marching north, etc.—and so the small voice of truth and reality trying to speak within me remained faint and almost unheard. Presently came Manoury's great effort to turn the German right flank. I witnessed one day of this fighting myself with General Manoury, and came back hopeful. Alas! these hopes were not fulfilled. Afterwards we witnessed the stupendous efforts of De Castlenau and Foch, but all ended in the same trench. I finished my part in the battle of the Aisne, however, unconverted, and it required the rather and more bitter lesson of my own failure in the north to pass the Lys River during the last days of October to bring home to my mind a principle in warfare of to-day which I have held ever since—namely, that, given forces fairly equally matched, you can 'bend,' but you cannot 'break,' your enemy's trench line. Everything which has happened in the war has borne out the truth of this view, and from the moment I grasped this great truth I never failed to proclaim it, although eventually I suffered heavily for holding such opinions."

SIR DOUGLAS HAIG IN FIFE.

Sir Douglas Haig was presented with the Freedom of Cupar Fife on Saturday. He was accorded civic honours, and was enthusiastically greeted, as he motored through the streets to St. John's United Free Church, where he signed the roll in the presence of a distinguished gathering. Speaking subsequently at the Provost's luncheon he said that it was for liberty and justice that we fought against a system of government which knew no laws higher than its own thirst for world dominion. Ours was a freedom which did not depend upon the subject and ruin of our neighbours, any more than it was at variance with an ordered and well conducted social state. In the coming peace he hoped that the opportunity that now was ours would be turned to the best account.

LONDON CORRESPONDENCE.

59 FLEET STREET, LONDON,
SUNDAY NIGHT.

The Germans have received check to their first counter-move, and the Peace Conference has awarded the right treatment to an attempt to make it look ridiculous. It is said that Count Brockdorff-Rantzau is anxious to have conversations with President Wilson, presumably in the hope that he may influence this astute representative of the United States. It is reported in Paris, however, that the behaviour of the German delegation at the sitting of the Peace Conference was an unpleasant surprise to the President.

Nothing of a definite character has yet been announced, but it is rumoured that a Royal Commission is to be set up before very long to inquire into the conduct of the early stages of the war, so far as the British Army is concerned. The Duke of Connaught may be asked to preside over the Commission, but it is improbable that he would accept such an appointment. If such a Commission is set up, its personnel would have to be most carefully chosen, and the difficulty in selecting men free from political or military bias would be a most serious one to overcome.

"The Picquet," writing in the Sunday Express, says that "a well-informed politician tells me that Mr. Asquith may be back in the House of Commons long before most people expect. It will probably be brought about by the resignation of a member and an agreement between the party leaders that the seat shall not be contested. It is well known that Mr. Lloyd George himself would very much like to see the old Liberal Leader back in his place."

An inquiry has been set on foot by the War Office, with a view to discovering whether the rations served to the men of the Army of the Rhine, though ample, require revision in the interests, especially, of the young soldiers who have recently joined up. They are now being served with the same rations as those given to men in the field. But that is not necessarily good for young men, and the object of the inquiry is to see in what way variety can be introduced, and already the young soldiers are getting more tea and sugar than was supplied to the field troops. All sorts of educational facilities are now being provided for the men composing the Army of Occupation, and that not only for the younger, but for the elder men, so that they may be better fitted, both in general and technical knowledge, for their return to civilian life later on.

It is expected that there will be several Courts at Buckingham Palace during the season, but no dates seem to have been arranged yet. It is almost certain, however, that there will be an evening Court of some importance during the present month for the reception of the diplomatic and official circles. The Princess Mary, the Prince of Wales, and Prince Albert will all be present at this Court in the Royal circle.

The Irish Housing Bill will come before the House of Commons on Tuesday.

Members of Parliament associated with shipping interests have, of course, noted specially, and not without concern, the report that all German steamers in American harbours are to be handed over to the United States Government under the peace arrangements. They regard such an allotment as, at least, remarkable, in view of the fact that the steamers must have been driven into those ports by the activities of he British Fleet, and in view, also, of the other fact that by far the greatest shipping losses during the war fell upon this country. Admiral Sir Reginald Hall declares his opinion that the allotment of enemy tonnage should be proportionate to the losses of the Allied and Associated Countries, and he proposes to inquire of the Government the exact extent of losses suffered respectively by the United States and ourselves.

Cardinal Mercier is about to pay a visit to London. I well remember his last visit during the early days of the war, when a great number of Nationalists paraded past the Cardinal and the late Mr. John Redmond at Archbishop's House, Westminster. The Cardinal, who was, at that time, deeply impressed by the patriotic fervour of the Irish people, recently inspired by Mr. Redmond, gave loud expression to "God Save Ireland." People are wondering if there will be a similar demonstration on this occasion.

The County Councils' Association has decided to organise a Roads and Transport Congress and Exhibition at the Royal Agricultural Hall, London, in November of this year. The arrangements, to a large extent, will follow the lines of the successful Roads Congress and Exhibition organised by the Association in 1915, but, in view of the important delevopments in regard to transport, it has been decided on the forthcoming occasion to pay special attention also to this branch of the road problem.

In view of certain misapprehensions which appear to exist as to the relation between unemployment insurance and out-of-work donation, the Minister of Labour calls the attention of employers to the fact that their liability to pay contributions in respect of work-people employed in trades insured against unemployment under the National Insurance (Unemployment) Acts, 1911 to 1918, is in no way affected by the operation of the temporary out-of-work donation scheme. Payment of the contributions due under the Acts mentioned at the rate of 5d. per week for work-people over 18 and 2d. per week for work-people between the ages of 16 and 18 must be made, notwithstanding the fact that the work-people may be the holders of out-of-work donation policies, whether as demobilised members of H.M. forces or otherwise.

The open examinations for the Rome Scholarships in Architecture, Sculpture, and Decorative Painting (offered by the Commissioners for the Exhibition of 1851), and for the Henry Jarvis Studentship in Architecture (offered by the Royal Institute of British Architects), due to be held in 1915, but postponed on account of the war, will be resumed in 1920, under the direction of the Faculties of Art of the British School at Rome. The age limit for the 1920 competitions will be increased to 35 years. The last day for submitting work for the open examinations will be January 31st, 1920. The Rome Scholarships are now of the value of £250 per annum and tenable for three years, and open to British-born subjects of either sex. The Jarvis Studentship, value £200 per annum, and tenable for two years, is limited to students or associates of the Royal Institute of British Architects competing for the Rome Scholarship in Architecture.

COUNTY DUBLIN FARMERS.

Delegates from various County Dublin branches of the Irish Transport and General Workers' Union met in Liberty Hall yesterday. It was stated that the business was to consider the offer of the farmers, of 38s. a week within a ten-miles radius of the city and 33s. outside that area, with £5 harvest bonus in both cases, payable on the 1st November, hours and other conditions to remain unaltered; and that it was decided to hold meetings of the branches in the county this afternoon, to take a ballot vote as to whether the terms would be accepted or not.

UNIONIST ANTI-PARTITION LEAGUE.

The Reconstruction Committee of the Irish Unionist Anti-Partition League met at 102 Grafton street, Dublin, on Friday, the 9th inst.—Mr. John Good, J.P., in the chair—and had under their consideration the Local Government (Ireland) Bill (Proportional Representation), the Housing of the Working Classes (Ireland) Bill, and other matters.

The meeting adjourned, to Friday, the 16th May, at 4.30 o'clock.

JOINT V.A.D. COMMITTEE FOR IRELAND.

COMPETITION FOR THE LADY ARNOTT CUP.

Keen interest was taken in the annual competition, which took place in the Art Industries Hall, Ballsbridge, on Saturday afternoon, for the Irish V.A.D. Challenge Cup, the gift of Lady Arnott, D.B.E., to the Joint V.A.D. Committee for Ireland. Four teams competed: the Harcourt N. Division, the Jacob and Co.'s Division (St. John Ambulance Brigade), the Co. Dublin V.A.D. 2, and the Co. Dublin V.A.D. 48 (British Red Cross Society). The total possible marks amounted to 250. The total possible marks for first aid were 100; for home nursing, 100; for stretcher-bearing, 25; and for drill, smartness, and correctness of uniform, 25. In drill, and as a smartly and correctly uniformed group, each section made a most favourable impression, and the skill, alacrity, and enthusiasm with which each worked must have demanded a critical eye and nice perception from the judges, who were: Captain F. Dunne, R.A.M.C.; Dr. Alfred Boyd, Mrs. C. F. Cooke, and Mrs. Shanks, County Directors; and Miss Patterson, Assistant Matron, Adelaide Hospital. One test was that of dealing with an imaginary bicycle accident on a country road, three-quarters of a mile from the nearest house, and it afforded opportunity to the competitors to put into practice those principles of first aid—observation, tact, resourcefulness, explicitness, and discrimination. For all-round proficiency, the Harcourt N. Division, who are the present holders of the cup, deserved the high marks of 190 which they secured. The Co. Dublin V.A.D. 2 came second with 175½ marks. The V.A.D. 48 got 166 marks, and Jacob and Co.'s Division 145.

At the conclusion of the competition, Mr. William Geoghegan, County Director, announced the results, amid applause, and the Lady Talbot de Malahide, Lady of Grace of the Order of St. John, handed the cup to Miss Beth Irwin, captain of the winning team, and a replica of it to each member.

The Lord Chief Justice proposed a vote of thanks to Lady Talbot de Malahide for having attended and presented the cup and replicas. He said that it was quite true that on that occasion they witnessed a very considerable diminution in the number of competitors for the cup, but that could be easily excused when one recollected that for the last four, or almost five years, they had been engaged in anxious and strenuous work. Everyone who had been in any way associated with that work was thoroughly convinced that it was of great importance to the nation, and that it would be a great, almost a national disaster, if the splendid spirit of enthusiasm which had been aroused among the younger generation of women was ever allowed to wane. Consequently, although to a great extent their work as a war work had ceased, he hoped that after this summer they would betake themselves once more to engage in a great work for the benefit of humanity, because, no doubt, there was a great future, and a great avenue for women's work. When he was witnessing the work of the judges that evening a vision came to him that the time, perhaps, might not be so far distant when he might find an able lady coadjutor in the Four Courts. (Laughter.) Whether that time was destined to come in his life-time, or in the life-time of his successor, there was no doubt that the great opportunity, the great hopes and the great experience which women had had in this generation would not be lost, but would survive for the betterment of the world. He was sure they would all unite with him in thanking Lady Talbot de Malahide for the great interest which she had always taken in that great work, and in all work of a charitable kind in Dublin. (Applause.)

The vote of thanks was passed with acclamation.

Lady Talbot de Malahide, in acknowledging the vote of thanks, said that it had given her the greatest pleasure and interest to come and see that splendid display, and she congratulated the winners very much.

Mr. Geoghegan, on behalf of St. John Ambulance Brigade, and the Red Cross Society, thanked the judges, who had given so much time and care to the competition.

NURSE CAVELL.

REMOVAL OF REMAINS TO ENGLAND.

A Reuter's Brussels telegram of Saturday says—The removal of Nurse Cavell's remains for interment in England will take place on May 15. The body was exhumed at Brussels on March 17 last, placed in a double coffin of zinc and oak, and conveyed to the Tir National. The body was found clothed in a black dress under a blue cloak. A black hat was also discovered in the coffin. The body was well preserved and the features perfectly recognisable. On May 13 at the Tir National Nurse Cavell's coffin will be placed on a gun carriage, driven by six black horses, which will convey it to the Gare du Nord. Military honours will be rendered at the Tir National and at the station.

In order that the public may have an opportunity to pay their last respects to the British heroine, the funeral procession will pass along the outer Boulevards, entering the Place Charles Rogier, in front of the Gare du Nord, by the Boulevard du Jardin Botanique.

The gun carriage will be preceded and followed by British troops, with bands. The Belgian Army will also be represented. The procession will enter the Gare du Nord by the main entrance, and a Funeral Service will be held in the station hall, conducted by the Rev. H. S. Gahan, the British Chaplain of Christ Church, Brussels, who was with Miss Cavell the night before her execution. The Service will consist of a few prayers, followed by a hymn. The Service will not be open to the public, but will be exclusively reserved for the authorities and the troops. The coffin will afterwards be placed in a mortuary van on the 2.10 p.m. train for Ostend.

Two sisters of the late Miss Cavell and a brother-in-law are expected shortly in Brussels to accompany the body on its removal to England. At the arrival of the train in Ostend the coffin will be placed on board a British warship, and on its arrival at Dover the Admiralty will hand over the coffin to the committee charged with organising the funeral in England. From Dover the remains will be conveyed to London, where they will be received at Victoria Station by an honorary military escort, placed on a gun carriage covered with the Union Jack, and conveyed to Westminster Abbey, where the Funeral Service will take place. After the Service, the procession will be re-formed and march to Liverpool street Station, whence the corpse will be taken to Norwich for burial.

It is understood from the facts revealed during the exhumation of Miss Cavell's body that her death was instantaneous. She was struck by four bullets, two entering the right side and two the left side. One of these pierced her heart.

DEMANDS OF IRISH LABOUR.

A LETTER TO EMPLOYERS AND OWNERS.

The National Executive of the Irish Labour Party and Trade Union Congress have issued a circular letter to the employers of labour and property owners of Ireland, in which, addressing them in the name of the organised working-class in Ireland, they give their view of the cause of "the so-called unrest" among the workers. Commencing with a reference to the steady rise in the cost of living, the circular proceeds to give quotations from publications on the subject of wages and living conditions at the outbreak of war, and states that after the outbreak of war, while prices rose daily, farmers, merchants, shopkeepers, and manufacturers all found their bank balances growing rapidly. Their deposits in the Irish banks alone had increased by £46,000,000 in the years 1914-1918, but they did not share their new-found wealth with the workers. They waited until compulsion was applied by the power of trade unions and the regulations of the State. And, after all, the workers to-day were actually in a worse financial position than they were before the war. The National Executive now claimed for the workers a higher standard of life than that which they suffered in 1914. Money wages must be raised to a point that will more than equal the increase in the cost of living. The only question open to discussion was—"How much above the 1914 real-wages standard (after adopting 20s. as the pre-war minimum) is to be accepted in settlement of the present demands?" The answer that the industry could not afford the livelihood which the Executive considered to be the only livelihood fit for a human being might be anticipated, but it was the business of the employers to see that industry did afford it.

Asserting that Ireland and all its natural resources belong to the people, the Executive accuses employers and property owners of having usurped authority over the material resources of the country. Turning to the subject of "Imperialistic dominion over Ireland," the document states—"Your predecessors partook of the fruits of tyranny. You, in your turn, have joined hands with your political enemies and have opposed and denounced every movement towards the supersession of that system of industry and commerce on which England's political dominion is based." The present methods of industry are doomed, it adds. Any remedy that could be suggested must end in giving the control of wealth production and distribution to the people engaged in those processes in the interests of the community, not by virtue of ownership, but of service. Energies should be directed to organising the production of goods for the use and service of the people. The circular concludes—"For the moment you, the legal proprietors and employers, are the people whose duty it is to lift the country out of the economic and social bog into which you have driven it. And you fail at your peril!"

BIG RAID FOR ARMS.

90 DISGUISED AND ARMED MEN.

RIFLES AND GUNS TAKEN FROM BALLYEDMOND CASTLE.

Our Newry Correspondent, writing last night, stated:—Ballyedmond Castle, the residence of Lieutenant Nugent, situate on the main road between Rostrevor and Kilkeel, and overlooking Carlingford Lough, was this morning, between 2 and 3 o'clock, the scene of a daring raid for arms. Between eighty and ninety men took part in the raid.

The raiders, who were accompanied by several cyclists (presumably scouts), were provided with nine or ten motor cars, and on the way to Ballyedmond they bound, gagged, and left lying on the roadside or fields adjacent any wayfarers that they met, so as to prevent any alarm being given.

Approaching the Castle the raiders boldly passed down the avenue, leaving guards at the entrance lodge. They speedily effected an entrance to the Castle through some of the windows on the ground floor. Once inside they went all over the Castle, and "held up" the inmates, including, it is said, Lieutenant Nugent (who served in the war with the 5th Royal Irish Lancers), at the point of revolvers. Others searched the different rooms, and seized five rifles and three shotguns, which they carried off.

At the time a boat was seen in the Lough, and it is believed that it was working in conjunction with the raiders.

A large body of police, under District Inspector Barrington and Head Constable Kearney, Newry, are actively engaged in making inquiries into the outrage, which has created a sensation in the locality.

The Press Association says:—The raiders were evidently in quest of the arms of the South Down Regiment of the Ulster Volunteers, which at one time were kept at the Castle, but were removed some time ago. Captain Nugent, on descending from his bedroom, was held up by about twenty men with revolvers.

OINT V.A.D. COMMITTEE FOR IRELAND.

COMPETITION FOR THE LADY ARNOTT CUP.

Keen interest was taken in the annual competition, which took place in the Art Industries Hall, Ballsbridge, on Saturday afternoon, for the Irish V.A.D. Challenge Cup, the gift of Lady Arnott, D.B.E., to the Joint V.A.D. Committee for Ireland. Four teams competed: the Harcourt N. Division, the Jacob and Co.'s Division (St. John Ambulance Brigade), the Co. Dublin V.A.D. 2, and the Co. Dublin V.A.D. 48 (British Red Cross Society). The total possible marks amounted to 250. The total possible marks for first aid were 100; for home nursing, 100; for stretcher-bearing, 25; and for drill, smartness, and correctness of uniform, 25. In drill, and as a smartly and correctly uniformed group, each section made a most favourable impression, and the skill, alacrity, and enthusiasm with which each worked must have demanded a critical eye and nice perception from the judges, who were Captain F. Dunne, R.A.M.C.; Dr. Alfred Boyd, Mrs. C. F. Cooke, and Mrs. Shanks, County Directors; and Miss Patterson, Assistant Matron, Adelaide Hospital. One test was that of dealing with an imaginary bicycle accident on a country road, three-quarters of a mile from the nearest house, and it afforded opportunity to the competitors to put into practice those principles of first aid—observation, tact, resourcefulness, expeditness, and discrimination. For all-round proficiency, the Harcourt N. Division, who are the present holders of the cup, deserved the high marks of 190 which they secured. The Co. Dublin V.A.D. 2 came second with 175½ marks. The V.A.D. 48 got 166 marks, and Jacob and Co.'s Division 145.

At the conclusion of the competition, Mr. William Geoghegan, County Director, announced the results amid applause, and the Lady Talbot de Malahide, Lady of Grace of the Order of St. John, handed the cup to Miss Beth Irwin, captain of the winning team, and a replica of it to each member.

The Lord Chief Justice proposed a vote of thanks to Lady Talbot de Malahide for having attended and presented the cup and replicas. He said that it was quite true that on that occasion they witnessed a very considerable diminution in the number of competitors for the cup, but that could be easily excused when one recollected that for the last four, or almost five years, they had been engaged in anxious and strenuous work. Everyone who had been in any way associated with that work was thoroughly convinced that it was of great importance to the nation, and that it would be a great, almost a national disaster, if the splendid spirit of enthusiasm which had been aroused among the younger generation of women was ever allowed to wane. Consequently, although to a great extent their work as a war work had ceased, he hoped that after this summer they would betake themselves once more to engage in a great work for the benefit of humanity, because, no doubt, there was a great future, and a great avenue for women's work. When he was witnessing the work of the judges that evening a vision came to him that the time, perhaps, might not be so far distant when he might find an able lady coadjutor in the Four Courts. (Laughter.) Whether that time was destined to come in his life-time, or in the life-time of his successor, there was no doubt that the great opportunity, the great hopes and the great experience which women had had in this generation would not be lost, but would survive for the betterment of the world. He was sure they would all unite with him in thanking Lady Talbot de Malahide for the great interest which she had always taken in that great work, and in all work of a charitable kind in Dublin. (Applause.)

Lady Talbot de Malahide, in acknowledging the vote of thanks, said that it had given her the greatest pleasure and interest to come and see that splendid display, and she congratulated the winners very much.

Mr. Geoghegan, on behalf of St. John Ambulance Brigade, and the Red Cross Society, thanked the judges, who had given so much time and care to the competition.

NURSE CAVELL.

REMOVAL OF REMAINS TO ENGLAND.

A Reuter's Brussels telegram of Saturday says:—The removal of Nurse Cavell's remains for interment in England will take place on May 15. The body was exhumed at Brussels on March 17 last, placed in a double coffin of zinc and oak, and conveyed to the Tir National. The body was found clothed in a black dress under a blue cloak. A black hat was also discovered in the coffin. The body was well preserved and the features perfectly recognisable. On May 13 at the Tir National Nurse Cavell's coffin will be placed on a gun carriage, drawn by six black horses, which will convey it to the Gare du Nord. Military honours will be rendered at the Tir National and at the station.

In order that the public may have an opportunity to pay their last respects to the British heroine, the funeral procession will pass along the outer Boulevards, entering the Place Charles Rogier, in front of the Gare du Nord, by the Boulevard du Jardin Botanique.

The gun carriage will be preceded and followed by British troops, with bands. The Belgian Army will also be represented. The procession will enter the Gare du Nord by the main entrance, and a Funeral Service will be held in the station hall, conducted by the Rev. H. S. Gahan, the British Chaplain of Christ Church, Brussels, who was with Miss Cavell the night before her execution. The Service will consist of a few prayers, followed by a hymn. The Service will not be open to the public, but will be exclusively reserved for the authorities and the troops. The coffin will afterwards be placed in a mortuary van on the 2.10 p.m. train for Ostend.

Two sisters of the late Miss Cavell and a brother-in-law are expected shortly in Brussels to accompany the body on its removal to England. At the arrival of the train in Ostend the coffin will be placed on board a British warship, and on its arrival at Dover the Admiralty will hand over the coffin to the committee charged with organising the funeral in England. From Dover the remains will be conveyed to London, where they will be received at Victoria Station by an honorary military escort, placed on a gun carriage covered with the Union Jack, and conveyed to Westminster Abbey, where the Funeral Service will take place. After the Service the procession will be re-formed and march to Liverpool street Station, whence the corpse will be taken to Norwich for burial.

It is understood from the facts revealed during the exhumation of Miss Cavell's body that her death was instantaneous. She was struck by four bullets, two entering the right side and two the left side. One of these pierced her heart.

DEMANDS OF IRISH LABOUR.

A LETTER TO EMPLOYERS AND OWNERS.

The National Executive of the Irish Labour Party and Trade Union Congress have issued a circular letter to the employers of labour and property owners of Ireland, in which, addressing them in the name of the organised working-class in Ireland, they give their view of the cause of "the so-called unrest" among the workers. Commencing with a reference to the steady rise in the cost of living, the circular proceeds to give quotations from publications on the subject of wages and living conditions at the outbreak of war, and states that after the outbreak of war, while prices rose daily, farmers, merchants, shopkeepers, and manufacturers all found their bank balances growing rapidly. Their deposits in the Irish banks alone had increased by £46,000,000 in the years 1914-1918, but they did not share their new-found wealth with the workers. They waited until compulsion was applied by the power of trade unions and the regulations of the State. And, after all, the workers to-day were actually in a worse financial position than they were before the war. The National Executive now claimed for the workers a higher standard of life than that which they suffered in 1914. Money wages must be raised to a point that will more than equal the increase in the cost of living. The only question open to discussion was: "How much above the 1914 pre-war minimum is to be accepted in settlement of the present demands?" The answer that the industry could not afford the livelihood which the Executive considered to be the only livelihood fit for a human being might be anticipated, but it was the business of the employers to see that industry did afford it. Asserting that Ireland and all its natural resources belong to the people, the Executive accuses employers and property owners of having usurped authority over the material resources of the country. Turning to the subject of "Imperialistic dominion over Ireland," the document states—"Your predecessors partook of the fruits of tyranny. You, in your turn, have joined hands with your political enemies and have opposed and denounced every movement towards the supersession of that system of industry and commerce on which England's political dominion is based." The present methods of industry are doomed, it adds. Any remedy that could be suggested must end in the control of wealth production and distribution to the people engaged in those businesses in the interests of the community, not by virtue of ownership, but of service. Energies should be directed to organising the production of goods for the use and service of the people. The circular concludes—"For the present, you, the legal proprietors and employers, are the people whose duty it is to lift the country out of the economic and social bog into which you have driven it. And you fail at your peril!"

BIG RAID FOR ARMS.

RIFLES AND GUNS TAKEN FROM BALLYEDMOND CASTLE.

Our Newry Correspondent, writing last night, stated:—Ballyedmond Castle, the residence of Lieutenant Nugent, situate on the main road between Rostrevor and Kilkeel, and overlooking Carlingford Lough, was this morning, between 2 and 3 o'clock, the scene of a daring raid for arms. Between eighty and ninety men took part in the raid.

The raiders, who were accompanied by several cyclists (presumably scouts), were provided with nine or ten motor cars, and on the way to Ballyedmond they bound, gagged, and left lying on the roadside or fields adjacent any wayfarers that they met, so as to prevent any alarm being given.

Approaching the Castle the raiders boldly passed down the avenue, leaving guards at the entrance lodge. They speedily effected an entrance to the Castle through some of the windows on the ground floor. Once inside they went all over the Castle, and "hold up" the inmates, including, it is said, Lieutenant Nugent (who served in the war with the 5th Royal Irish Lancers), at the point of revolvers. Others searched the different rooms, and seized five rifles and three shotguns, which they carried off.

At the time a boat was seen in the Lough, and it is believed that it was working in conjunction with the raiders.

A large body of police, under District Inspector Barrington and Head Constable Kearney, Newry, are actively engaged in making inquiries into the outrage, which has created a sensation in the locality.

The Press Association says:—The raiders were evidently in quest of the arms of the South Down Regiment of the Ulster Volunteers, which at one time were kept at the Castle, but were removed some time ago. Captain Nugent, on descending from his bedroom, was held up by about twenty men with revolvers.

MILITARY FUNERAL IN DUBLIN.

AEROPLANES ATTEND THE BURIAL OF DEAD OFFICER.

A remarkable and touching scene was witnessed in Dublin on Saturday afternoon, when the funeral took place from the King George V. Hospital to the military cemetery in the Phoenix Park of Lieutenant Kretnar, of the Royal Air Force, who met with fatal injuries through colliding with a tree when landing from an aeroplane in North County Dublin on Thursday. The deceased officer was of American nationality, but joined the British Army, and saw service with the R.A.F. He had no relatives resident in the United Kingdom, and consequently no members of his family were able to attend the funeral. The coffin, instead of being borne on a gun carriage, as is customary at military funerals, rested upon one of the carriers used by the R.A.F., and was draped with the Union Jack, on which rested a number of wreaths of beautiful natural flowers. A firing party, with arms reversed, marched on either side of the coffin, which was preceded by the band of the Royal Irish Constabulary, from the Depot. A large party of officers marched behind the remains, including many of Lieutenant Kretnar's brother officers of the R.A.F. As the procession wended its way from the hospital to the cemetery three aeroplanes hovered overhead, and at times one would descend and fly along a few hundred feet above the mourners, the drone of the engines mingling with the solemn music of the band. Only the military marching in the procession were admitted to the cemetery, the gates being closed against the public, but many civilians and soldiers remained outside watching the aeroplanes until the volleys of the firing party rang out and the "Last Post" was sounded.

OBITUARY.

SIR HERVEY J. LL. BRUCE, BART., D.L.

The death occurred at Tangier, Morocco, on Friday evening of Colonel Sir Hervey Lloyd Bruce, Baronet, Deputy-Lieutenant for County Londonderry. Since the beginning of the spring Sir Hervey had suffered from a severe bronchial attack, and, acting on medical advice, he left for Tangier on the 17th April, in the hope that the warmer climate would restore him to his former health and vigour. On the death in December, 1907, of his father, the Right Hon. Sir Henry Hervey Bruce, Baronet, he succeeded to the title, which was created in 1804, and to the ownership of Downhill Castle and estate in the County Londonderry. His father was the last M.P. for Coleraine, and served in the Parliament of 1880-85, until the borough was merged in the North Derry Parliamentary Division, under the Redistribution of Seats Act. Sir Henry Bruce was in his 76th year, having been born in London on the 5th October, 1843. In 1872 he married Ellen, daughter of the late Mr. Percy Ricardo, of Bramley Park, Guildford. For the past years Lady Bruce has been a leading and popular figure in the public affairs of the County Derry. During the war she prominently identified herself with nursing and other work for the good of the men on active service, and in recognition of her work, she recently received the Order of the British Empire. Educated at Eton College, Sir Hervey Bruce was in his 19th year when he entered the Army, joining the Coldstream Guards. He retired with the rank of Colonel in 1878. There are four sons, the heir to the baronetcy being Major Hervey Ronald Bruce, J.P., who was born on the 9th December, 1872.

MAJOR F. M. TAYLOR, M.C.

We much regret to learn that official intimation has been received that Major F. M. Taylor, M.C., R.A.M.C., previously reported missing, is now reported to have been killed in action on the 17th March last. On active service since the commencement of the war, he had been employed in France and Palestine, and from August, 1918, in North Russia, where, at the time of his death, he was Senior Medical Officer of the Vologda Force. In recognition of his work in the latter capacity he was promoted to be Major, and awarded the Military Cross. Major Taylor was the younger son of Mr. J. Taylor, C.B., Assistant Under-Secretary, Dublin Castle.

REV. E. DONOVAN, S.J.

The death took place at St. Ignatius College, Galway, yesterday of the Rev. Edward Donovan, S.J., in his eightieth year. Father Donovan, who had a long and distinguished career in the Order, had travelled throughout the world on missionary work.

MR. F. D. CARR.

Mr. Frederick D. Carr, who acted as agent for the Bank of Ireland at Youghal for over a quarter of a century, died on Friday evening.

THE "1914" STAR.

The War Office announces that the "1914" Star for officers and other ranks of the undermentioned regiments is now ready for issue:—Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry, Hereford Regiment, Wiltshire Regiment, Devonshire Regiment, Somerset Light Infantry, and Dorsetshire Regiment.

This announcement refers to the 1914 Star only.

FORGERY OF ARMY MONEY ORDERS.

Owing to the discovery of a daring forgery of Army money orders, a whole set of the issues has been cancelled. The amount of the forged notes runs into four figures.

At a crowded meeting at Bristol yesterday a resolution was passed demanding the removal of the Liquor Control Board. Mr. Ben Tillett said that a terrible indictment against organisations promoting prohibition was that none of them ever helped to put a meal on the workingman's table. No teetotal organisation had promoted an increased standard of living or wages.

FROM "THE TIMES" OF TO-DAY.

(BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT WITH THE PROPRIETORS OF THE TIMES.)

THE GERMAN NOTES.

Commenting on the German Notes in reply to the Allied terms of peace, The Times says:—The second Note assumes that the Allies ought to be anxious to make Germany one of the family, and to give her the best seat at its councils. This pushing prodigal son has the gracelessness to reproach his relatives for not deserving him afar off and coming to meet him. More graceless still, he volunteers suggestions for the better regulation of the establishment, even before the door is open to him. When will Germany understand that people are stern with her because she is responsible for the death or maiming of those who are dearest to them, that they look for some sign of contrition, and that bad manners do not mend bad morals? The German suggestions towards a League of Nations will, of course, be considered, but if they are anything like those put forward a couple of months ago, they have no chance of acceptance, for they contemplate the creation of an international super-State which the Conference of Paris decisively, and in good reason, rejected. As for Germany's complaint that she has not been admitted already to the League, she is reminded that her admission depends on herself. She cannot be a loyal member of the League unless she is loyal to the Treaty as a whole, and as she has not even signed it yet, we are a very long way from proof of her loyalty to it. The Germans will, concludes The Times, pass from protesting that they will never sign the Treaty to intrigue and apparent acquiescence, but they will sign, for the simple reason that they have no alternative, and that the sentence on them is no more, though it may be at some points less, than just.

IMPERIAL GUARDS.

Discussing a project for the formation of an Imperial unit of the Army, The Times observes: Some Imperial unit of the Army there must be, if only to keep alive the Dominion tradition in British military life. That unit would be created if there could be established a regiment of Imperial Guards, with its home here, but commanded, officered, and manned by Dominion men. The regiment of Imperial Guards might, for example, comprise two battalions—one composed of officers and men from Canada, South Africa, and Newfoundland, the other drawn from Australia and New Zealand. That is only a tentative suggestion. It leaves India out of account, and on this and other grounds it is plainly open to criticism and suggestion. But it could easily be modified, if necessary. A regiment of Imperial Guards, however, there should certainly be.

IRISH POLICY.

Mr. Richardson Evans, who writes from Wimbledon, London, continues the correspondence in The Times on the Irish situation. Pointing out that there are three, not two, parties now in Irish politics, he proceeds:—If the people of Great Britain resolve to break with the past, and with ungrudging spirit enter into a fresh part, they need not fear the result of self-determination. Sinn Fein is not a homogeneous force. It represents a temporary conjunction of incompatible elements. Even to-day the difficulties of maintaining the semblance of union are apparent. The leaders of the revolutionary Socialist and Labour element have little in common with the believers in the possibility of reviving the mythical glories of Gaelic romance. The Roman Catholic Church is becoming uneasily aware of the need of escape from its compromising relations with those who serve under the Red flag. Bishops are telling their flocks that Socialism and Republicanism are condemned by the Pope. The farmers, in spite of the fascination which midnight drilling and raids for arms have for the younger men, are quite capable of appreciating the value of the English market for their horses, their live stock, their bacon, their dairy produce. Secure, after centuries of struggle, in the proprietorship of the soil, they will be slow to place themselves at the mercy of the land nationalisers of the towns, while fathers of clever sons clearly understand that when lucrative careers in the service of the Empire are closed there will be no home demand for native genius. A shrewd perception of personal advantage is a trait seldom absent in the character of the most patriotic Irishman. When the mind of the majority of the people has declared in favour of remaining within the realm, the obstinate refusal of the north-eastern counties—of which my friend, Mr. Ronald McNeill, somewhat superfluously reminds us—to submit to any form of Home Rule will still have to be dealt with. Here I can only say that one expedient has not yet been tried. Those who have been the friends of Ulstermen in the past have still to appeal to them to accept loyally the decision of the Parliament of the United Kingdom.

IRELAND AND THE HEPTARCHY.

The Government have, says The Times Parliamentary Correspondent, arranged a very tame agenda for the week, and are leaving it to private members to keep Parliament in touch with the main stream of affairs. Thus Mr. Hartshorn, the Labour member, will raise what cannot fail to be a debate of the first importance on the condition of Ireland on Wednesday night. He will then propose the following resolution:—"That this House views with regret and concern the present conditions prevailing in Ireland, which tend further to alienate the people of that country from the people of Great Britain, and subject to international suspicion our earnest efforts to promote and safeguard the freedom of other small nations." At the same sitting Mr. Ronald McNeill will repeat his questions to the Government about the visit of the Irish-American delegates to Ireland. He will more particularly ask whether it is the intention of the Prime Minister to receive these American gentlemen on their return to Paris; and, if so, whether he has considered the effect likely to be produced in Ireland by his encouragement of foreign interference in British affairs, and by his patronage of revolutionary propagandists. Meanwhile, members are tabling amendments to the federal devolution motion, which has substantial support. Mr. Mackinder and others ask for consideration of the desirability of dividing England into provinces, each with its subordinate legislature, in order to avoid the inconveniences which might result from the great predominance of one partner in the federation. This looks very much like the old Heptarchy.

LORD FRENCH'S ARTICLES.

The Government will, states The Times Parliamentary Correspondent, be called upon in the House of Commons, to-day to answer a budget of questions about Lord French's newspaper articles on the 1914 campaign. The issue between Lord French and his critics is raised in its most direct form by Mr. Inskip, who will ask Mr. Churchill—(1) Whether the newspaper articles appearing over the name of Lord French are published with the sanction of the Army Council? (2) whether the Army Council has any power to restrain their publication, and whether they propose to exercise it? Captain Ormsby-Gore will call Mr. Churchill's attention to Paragraph 453 of the King's Regulations, and ask whether all officers on the active list of soldiers are forbidden to publish in any form whatever, or communicate directly or indirectly to the Press, their views on military subjects without special authority of the Army Council. Lord Winterton is anxious to know whether, in the circumstances, the Prime Minister will relax the regulations by which serving officers in either Service are forbidden to publish accounts of operations in order that they may have an opportunity of replying to the strictures of their former chiefs.

PROJECTED FARMERS' BANK.

We understand, says The Times, that leading British agriculturists, who may be considered to have the confidence of all interested in agriculture, have for some time past been considering the formation of a farmers' bank, and that it has now been decided that such a bank should be formed. One of the largest of the joint stock banks has already promised to assist, and it is hoped that others will follow its lead.

The preliminary conditions of the Australian Government's offer of a £10,000 prize for the first Australian airman to fly from Great Britain to the Commonwealth have, states The Times, been arranged at a conference, attended by representatives of Mr. Andrew Fisher, High Commissioner for Australia in London, the Royal Aero Club, and the Air Ministry.

AT THE CONFERENCE

OUR LETTER FROM PARIS.

THE TERMS OF PEACE.

THE MIND OF GERMANY.

(FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

PARIS, MAY 10.

There is a strong, but unconfirmed, rumour in Paris to-night that the German Delegation have asked for their passports, in order to return to Berlin. The story first appeared in the Paris edition of the Chicago Tribune, and, later, in an evening paper. It is known that Mr. Lloyd George, Mr. Wilson, and M. Clemenceau have been in frequent consultation as to their probable line of action in case the Germans should refuse to sign the Treaty; and this suggests that they do not share the all but universal optimism in Paris, that the Germans will be ready to sign early in June. The chief reason advanced for this view is that the Germans' present state is so precarious that they are obliged to sign. Count Brockdorff-Rantzau was only quoting what many official reports from Germany have stated when he spoke of the starvation prevailing in Germany. Hunger is a very powerful weapon in the hands of the Entente, and fear of immediate starvation may outweigh all other considerations and force an unwilling agreement.

It is doubtful, however, whether such a settlement would be of much value. The present terms can only be carried out as a result of a considerable amount of co-operation between the Allies and their former enemy. For instance, the payment of the indemnity claims can only be carried out by the restoration of a vigorous and healthy trade with us by Germany, directly or indirectly. Their payment will be made, in the main, partly by the export of coal and potash, partly by labour in manufacturing on raw materials. Take, again, the Saar Valley mines, which will be worked by German labour. If the Treaty is signed at once, in order to escape from an intolerable position, it will be followed by endless attempts at evasion, which will only keep alive the differences between us. The German Press is strong in its denunciation of the terms. The Vorwärts says:—"A Peace of annihilation! If we sign this Peace, it is because we have bowed to force; but in our hearts we resolutely reject it."

This evening the first note of challenge was received from Count Brockdorff-Rantzau on behalf of the German Delegation. It states that "they were not prepared to find that the promise explicitly given to the German people, and the whole of mankind, is to be rendered illusory. The draft of the Treaty contained demands which no nation could endure. Moreover, our experts hold that many of them could not possibly be carried out." The Allied reply points out that no discussion of the right of the Allied Powers to insist upon the terms substantially as drafted can be entertained. It is quite certain that the Allies do not intend to make any alteration in the terms, so that the next few days are bound to see the climax. It is either a matter of signing or of refusing. Reference to the German public will not alter the situation materially from one point of view. Whatever the result, it simply moves the responsibility for the step to other shoulders. Before there can be any real peace democratic opinion in Germany must be able to see in the terms, however severe, the elemental justice which we claim for them. It must be in the interest of the beaten people to accept the result of the defeat as a penalty to be honourably discharged.

To-day I was introduced to the son of one of the Alsatian delegates to the German Reichstag. During the war he had been twice to Switzerland, but was obliged to return at the expiration of his leave for fear of reprisals to his relatives. Through an unguarded conversation his pro-Ally sympathies were discovered, and he was put into uniform. In the last two years of the war he fought in Russia, Rumania, Serbia, and on the West front—even against his own people. Every man was covered by the revolver of the German guard. He could hardly be suspected of having any sympathy with Germany; but his intimate acquaintance with the point of view of our enemies gives his opinions a special value. When asked about the peace terms, he said: "The Allied peoples do not understand the German mind. It is the mind of an enslaved race. The glamour of material prosperity of pre-war Germany conceals the fact that the ruling caste took care that the non-ruling classes were mentally paralysed. In North Germany peasants thrashed by the landowners never resented it, but preserved an obsequious respectfulness. In other parts the attitude was one of mechanical obedience to the military officer. The revolution was not genuine because it left the mind in slavery. The next party to gain power will control the German nation as easily as the last Government. The choice is between a disguised Kaiserism and an unpractical idealism. The Allies' only hope of a permanent peace is to seize upon New Germany's ill-formed conceptions of democracy and supply the motives for their development. The German people believed its rulers when taught that it had been brutally attacked from all sides. The average German is at heart as peaceful as any other rational human being. The problem is to get him to realise that the rest of the world really wants peace."

Some weeks ago it was said that peace with Germany would be a comparatively simple affair compared with peace with the other States. Matters must have changed since then, for, though the Council of Four has only begun to deal with the territorial and other questions, the Austrian delegates have been called to St. Germains for Monday next. The natural sense of reaction following the recent handing over of the terms to the Germans, and the anxiety resulting from the attitude taken up by them, is not predisposing the Council of Four to devote their best efforts at present to the rest of the peace treaties. The chief questions are, however, territorial, and experts will have prepared their recommendations. There is also the eternal problem of Constantinople, which is always under consideration, but never reaches a settlement.

THE INDIVIDUAL AND THE STATE.

PRESIDENT WILSON AND FREEDOM OF SPEECH.

The Press Association has received from the United States Committee on Public Information a report of a speech delivered by President Wilson at the Institute of France on Saturday.

In the course of his remarks, he said:—It has been my very great joy in recent months to interpret the people of the United States to the people of the world. I have not uttered in my public capacity my own private thoughts. I have uttered what I knew to be the thoughts of the great people whom I represent. I have uttered the things that have been stored up in their heart and purpose from the time of our birth as a nation. We came into the world consecrated to liberty, and whenever we see the cause of liberty imperilled, we are ready to cast in our lot in common with the lot of those whose liberty is threatened. A great many of my colleagues in American University life got their training even in political science, as so many men in the civil sciences did in German Universities. I have been obliged at various times to read a great deal of bad German, difficult German, awkward German, and I have been aware that the thought was as awkward as the phrase, that the thought was rooted in a fundamental misconception of the State, and of the political life of peoples, and it has been a portion of my effort to disengage the thought of American University teachers from this misguided instruction which they have received from this side of the sea. Their American spirit emancipated most of them as a matter of course, but the form of thought sometimes misled them. They spoke too often of the State as a thing which could ignore the individual as a thing which was privileged to dominate the fortunes of men by a sort of inherent and sacred authority. Now, as an utter Democrat, I have never been able to accept that view of the State. My view of the State is, that it must stop and listen to what I have to say, no matter how humble I am, and that each man has the right to have his voice heard, and his counsel heeded in so far as it is worthy of heed. I have always been among those who believed that the greatest freedom of speech was the greatest safety, because if a man is a fool the best thing to do is to encourage him to advertise the fact by speaking. In this free air of free speech men get into that sort of communication with one another which constitutes the basis of all common achievement.

LORD GREY AND LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

MUST NOT BE A LEAGUE OF CONQUERORS.

Lord Grey of Fallodon, than whom no Englishman has done more to further the creation of the League of Nations, allows us to publish his answers to some questions of general interest which were recently put to him, says the Press Association.

Will you let me have your views on the amended Covenant of the League? Do you think it is a good document? I am delighted that so much ground has been covered, and so much work done. It is easy to desire more, but personally I had feared that much less would be accomplished at the Conference. It is comparatively easy for nations in the face of a common peril to make common cause for carrying on war, but for many nations to agree on matters so various, so important, and so permanent, as are contained in this Covenant is a greater and more difficult achievement. It proves that the downfall of Germany has convinced them that in the long run the national development of each can be better assured by the confidence and security of permanent peace than by attempts to promote separate national interests.

In your speech on October 10th you mentioned three questions in particular, the solution of which, in your view, either depended upon or would be greatly helped by the establishment of the League of Nations. They were: Labour, disarmament, and responsibility for the backward races. Does the Covenant in these matters do what you hoped for from it? It makes a good beginning with every one of them. As regards labour, it accepts the provisions of the Labour Convention. It is much to the good that there is already an International Labour Convention to be accepted. As to the reduction of armaments I have always felt that the most effective reduction will come from the sense of security created by the League. Armaments will diminish as the League becomes strong and vital, and pressure of public opinion within the League must be brought to bear to reduce armaments and to secure the utmost publicity with regard to them. The acceptance of the mandatory principle with regard to the backward races is a great point gained. The application of that principle will, I hope, be clear and definite in the separate instructions which I understand will deal with each mandated territory. On the same questions, particularly the reduction of armaments, it has been, or will be, said that the Covenant is too tentative, and does not go far enough. Those who incline to such criticism should not forget that in some quarters the project of a League of Nations, and, therefore, the Covenant as whole, is thought to go too far and to be ideal—that it is beyond human nature to attain. The acceptance of the Covenant and the working of it will, I believe, prove that those who think it goes too far and is impracticable are wrong, and when that is proved and admitted we shall find that it will increasingly satisfy those who at present think that it does not go far enough.

What do you consider are the principal parts of the constitution of the League? The key of the whole organism is the annual meeting of Prime Ministers or Foreign Secretaries of the nine States represented on the Council. So long as that meeting is regularly held and wisely inspired, so long may we confidently hope the peace of the world will be secure. The meetings of the Assembly, too, are of great importance. Its constitution has, I believe, been criticised on the ground that it is not sufficiently democratic. But its members will be sent there by their Governments, and it will be for the peoples themselves to see to it that those members really represent them. Much will depend on the right men being chosen for the work. The responsibility of the Secretary-General will be heavy, but in Sir Eric Drummond the Conference has chosen a man who will be able to bear it. I well know his ability at the Foreign Office, and I know with what sincerity and conviction he has always worked for the establishment of the League.

In reply to a further question, Lord Grey said that he still held to the belief expressed in his speech, that Russia and the enemy States must be admitted into the League so soon as they could be relied on to observe its covenant in the spirit and the letter. I say that the League must not be a league of conquerors, concluded Lord Grey, but I do not mean we ought ever to forget that only the heroic sacrifice of the armies of freedom have made its establishment possible.

THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

CHINO-JAPANESE PROBLEMS.

(FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

PARIS, SATURDAY.

It is generally believed over here that President Wilson has no intention of allowing the League of Nations to be forgotten as soon as the Paris Conference breaks up. It is said that, as his term of office finishes this year, he wants the League at its opening in October to plunge straight into business. From what one knows of what is going on here, it seems more probable that the League will be deluged with demands for consideration of problems raised or left unsolved by the Paris Conference. Among the first things to be brought forward is the defeated Japanese amendment. The Japanese intention is to relax no effort to force the League to reverse the decision of Paris. It means, of course, that, when the question is brought up before the League, the amendment will not express a readiness, as heretofore, to omit it from application to the immigration questions. It will demand equal rights for all nationals, parties to the Covenant. Neither California nor Australia would listen to such a proposal. It will be difficult, however, to show good ground for excluding Japanese immigrants from colonies administered by the League. Among the number of such territories will be German New Guinea, administered by a mandate to Australia.

Great bitterness prevails among the Chinese, who are also preparing to bombard the League with demands for reversal of the Paris decision. Their dissatisfaction is all the more intense because of the manner in which the whole transaction has taken place. Although called upon to furnish to the Council of Three their views on the Shantung question, no official notification of the decision of the Conference has yet reached them. They are informed indirectly that the matter does not affect them, but is solely an operation involving Germany and Japan, the subsequent disposal of the territory being a matter for arrangement between Japan and China. The latter country very naturally feels that a nation so strong as Japan will be in possession of more than nine points of the law. The Korean delegation is adding another complication to a situation which will be fraught with possibilities for post-war international politics, demanding most statesmanlike handling.

THE ACCOMPLISHMENT OF JUSTICE.

WHERE THE HEART OF THE WORLD BEATS.

Speaking at a gathering of the International Law Society in Paris on Friday evening, presided over by Sir Thomas Barclay, President Wilson said:—One of the things that has disturbed me in recent months is the unqualified hope that men have entertained everywhere of immediate emancipation from the things that have hampered them and oppressed them. You cannot in human experience rush into the light. You have to go through the twilight into the broadening day before the noon comes and the full sun is upon the landscape, and we must see to it that those who hope are not disappointed by showing them the process by which hope must be realised—processes of law, processes of slow disentanglement from the many things that have bound us in the past. In one sense this great unprecedented war was fought to give validity to international law. If we can now give to international law the kind of vitality which it can have only if it is a real expression of our moral judgments we shall have completed in some sense the work which this war was intended to emphasise. In the new League of Nations we are starting out upon uncharted seas, and, therefore, we must have the will, not, say, the audacity, but the steadiness of purpose, which is necessary in such novel circumstances and we must not be afraid of new things. At the same time we must not be intolerant of old things. We must weave out of the old material the new garments which it is necessary that men should wear. It is a great privilege if we can do that kind of thing for mankind. The heart of the world is under very plain jackets at very simple firesides in very humble circumstances, and unless you know the pressure of life in the humbler classes you know nothing of life whatever. We must use our leisure so that we can translate their desires into fact as far as that is possible, and see that that most complicated and elusive of all things that we call justice is accomplished.

QUIET IN THE PUNJAB.

INDIAN AGITATORS AND AFGHAN AFFAIR.

The India Office announces that in the Punjab no further disturbances have been reported. An attempt by two students to stir up disaffection among the Jats of Hissar district is reported. Elsewhere quiet continues.

Indian agitators are stated, in the report received from an Afghan source, to have pledged themselves to attacks on aircraft and mechanical transport and to incendiarism.

GERMANY'S FIRST TRICK FAILS.

ATTEMPT TO CHALLENGE THE PEACE TERMS.

M. CLEMENCEAU'S SHARP REJOINDER.

NO DISCUSSION OF THE ALLIES' RIGHT.

COUNT BROCKDORFF AND THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

GERMANY AND THE PEACE TERMS.

EXCHANGE OF NOTES.

ALLIES' UNCOMPROMISING REPLY.

The text of the Notes exchanged between Count Brockdorff-Rantzau and M. Clemenceau is published here, says a Press Association message dated Paris, Saturday. They are as follows:—

FIRST GERMAN NOTE.

"The German Peace Delegation has finished the first perusal of the Peace conditions which have been handed over to them. They have had to realise that on essential points the basis of the peace of right agreed upon between the belligerents has been abandoned. They were not prepared to find that the promise explicitly given to the German people and the whole of mankind is in this way to be rendered illusory. The draft of the Treaty contains demands which no nation could endure. Moreover, our experts hold that many of them could not possibly be carried out. The German Peace Delegation will substantiate these statements in detail, and transmit to the Allied and Associated Governments their observations and their material continuously.

"(Signed) BROCKDORFF-RANTZAU."

THE ALLIES' REPLY.

"The representatives of the Allied and Associated Powers have received the statement of the objections of the German Plenipotentiaries to the draft conditions of peace. In reply, they wish to remind the German Delegation that they have framed the terms of the Treaty with constant thought of the principles upon which the armistice and the negotiations for peace were proposed. They can admit of no discussion of their right to insist upon the terms of the peace substantially as drafted. They can consider only such practical suggestions as the German Plenipotentiaries may have to submit."

SECOND GERMAN NOTE.

VERSAILLES, MAY 9TH, 1919.

"The German Peace Delegation has the honour to pronounce its attitude on the question of a League of Nations by herewith transmitting a German programme, which, in the opinion of the Delegation, contains important suggestions on the League of Nations problem. The German Peace Delegation reserves for itself the liberty of stating its opinion on the draft of the Allied and Associated Governments in detail. In the meantime it begs to call attention to the discrepancy lying in the fact that Germany is called upon to sign the statute of the League of Nations as an integral part of the Treaty Draft handed over to us. On the other hand, however, she is not mentioned among the States which are invited to join the League of Nations. The German Peace Delegation begs to inquire whether, and, if so, in what circumstances, such invitation is intended.

"Accept, sir, the expression of my highest estimation.

THE ALLIES' REPLY.

"The receipt of the German programme of a League of Nations is acknowledged. The programme will be referred to the Appropriate Committee of the Allied and Associated Powers. The German Plenipotentiaries will find, upon re-examination of the Covenant of the League of Nations, that the matter of the admission of additional member States has not been overlooked, but is explicitly provided for in the second paragraph of Article One."

GERMAN NOTE ON PRISONERS.

Count von Brockdorff-Rantzau, says a Berlin telegram of Sunday's date, has addressed the following Note to M. Clemenceau, President of the Peace Conference:—

Herr President,—The German Peace Delegation has noted with satisfaction, in the Draft Treaty handed to it, the recognition of the principle of sending German war and civilian prisoners home with the greatest possible despatch. In the view of the German Peace Delegation the details regarding the carrying out of this question should be referred to a Special Commission. Direct oral discussions between Commissions of almost all the belligerent States, in questions concerning prisoners of war, have, even during hostilities, proved to be the most effective way of solving difficulties. It should now be all the easier to remove differences of conception or lack of clearness on particular points. For example, in view of the variety of legal conceptions in the individual countries concerned, the German Peace Delegation considers it indispensable that those war and civilian prisoners who are detained, or are undergoing punishment for other than disciplinary offences, should, in principle, be included amongst those to be unconditionally sent home. In regard to the war and civilian prisoners of Allied and Associated Powers in its hands, Germany has recognised the same principle. It appears self-evident to the German Peace Delegation, therefore, that on the grounds of fairness, certain alleviations of the treatment of war and civilian prisoners should be agreed upon, pending their return. For the rest, the German Peace Delegation has had to note the one-sided way in which some few stipulations are made in favour of the Allied and Associated Governments, as, for instance, those regarding the surrender of personal property, the search for missing subjects, and the care of graves. It assumes that in these questions complete reciprocity is a demand founded on general human rights. Owing to the great difficulties of the technical carrying out of the return of war and civilian prisoners, particularly in view of the scarcity of shipping accommodation, and the lack of coal, great importance must be attached to the clearing up of all preliminary questions before the time of the actual commencement of their removal. The German Peace Delegation therefore proposes that deliberations by Commissions on war and civilian prisoners shall be at once begun separately from the discussion of the remaining questions. This proposal is primarily based on the fact that many thousands of German war and civilian prisoners are still in overseas countries. The German Peace Delegation also has in mind, in this connection, that Germans are still in Siberia, whose transport appears to be not only particularly urgent, but also extremely difficult. On the grounds of internal policy, importance must, on Germany's part, be attached to the German war and civilian prisoners returning home under the most orderly conditions possible, and to their being reinstated in economic life with the greatest possible despatch. This only seems possible if, apart from the exact regulation of transport, everything is done to raise the moral and physical state of those returning home. In view of the German economic position, it is impossible for Germany by her own strength to provide the requisite guarantees. Feeding and clothing, particularly, come into consideration here. The German Peace Delegation considers that it would answer this purpose if the deliberations of the Commissions were also extended to the question of how far it would be possible, on the part of the Allied and Associated Governments, to help Germany in this question, and, for example, in return for repayment of cost, to provide the prisoners with completely new outfits, with underclothing and civilian suits, as well as boots, before their return.

NOTE ON LABOUR QUESTIONS.

In addition to his Note on prisoners of war, Count von Brockdorff-Rantzau has sent to M. Clemenceau another Note, dealing with Labour questions, and enclosing, in connection with the League of Nations proposals, the draft of an agreement on international Labour law drawn up by the German Government. The Note states that the German Government agrees with the Allied and Associated Governments that the greatest attention must be paid to Labour questions. International peace and human progress depend on how these questions are handled. The demands for social justice drawn up in this connection by the workers of all lands only partly find endorsement in principle in the section of the Allied and Associated Governments' draft of the Peace Terms. These high demands have, for the most part, already been carried out in an admittedly exemplary fashion in the German Empire, with the assistance of the workers. In order, in the interest of the whole of humanity, to put them everywhere into practice, the acceptance of the German Delegation's proposal is certainly requisite. We consider it necessary that all States shall join in the agreement, even if they do not belong to the League of Nations. In order to assure to the workers for whom the proposed improvements are destined, co-operation in the shaping of these prescriptions, the German Delegations considers it necessary to convoke representatives of the national organisations of Labour Unions of all the contracting countries to a Conference at Versailles, even during the Peace negotiations, to deliberate and take decisions on international Labour law. The German Delegation considers that it would be advantageous for the proceedings of this Conference to be based on the decisions of the International Trades Union Conference held at Berne from February 5th to 9th, 1919, constituting the programme for international Labour legislation at the Peace Conference in Paris, which decisions arose out of the decisions of the International Trade Union Conference at Leeds in 1916. Charged to do so by the Unions of Germany, we append a copy of these decisions, which have been accepted by representatives of the Trades Union organisations in Bohemia, Bulgaria, Denmark, Germany, Great Britain, France, Greece, Holland, Italy, Canada, Norway, Austria, Sweden, Switzerland, Spain, and Hungary.

ATTITUDE OF THE GERMAN DELEGATES.

The Exchange Company's Berne Correspondent says:—All the Berlin despatches show that the German Government is absolutely determined to reply to the Peace Treaty by a national demonstration. It was by the orders of the Government that the Stock Exchange in Berlin and Frankfort were closed, and all amusements prohibited. The entire German nation will devote itself to holding demonstrations of protest. Herr Scheidemann will address the National Assembly on May 12, as will also the representatives of the German parties, and all will voice energetic protests against the peace terms. The aim is, above all, to prove that the conditions are not only unacceptable, but are impossible of realisation. Meanwhile, the negotiators at Versailles will prepare a new Treaty, which they will submit to the Peace Conference. They claim that it is based on President Wilson's 14 Points, but do not conceal their intention to extract from these 14 Points everything that may be favourable to Germany.

There is great activity in Ministerial circles, and meetings of the Cabinet and the Peace Committee are held daily. On Friday a Note was written for the Allies, in which Germany declares its readiness to discuss the terms and make counter-proposals within the time limit, also requesting discussion. Count Brockdorff-Rantzau make a request for a personal meeting with President Wilson and other leading statesmen.

According to the Petit Parisien, Colonel Henry, Chief of the French Military Staff attached to the German Delegation, has issued a formal denial of the rumour that the German Delegation was going to return to Germany, or that Count Brockdorff had ever shown any desire hurriedly to leave France. Colonel Henry added that it had certainly been stated among the entourage of the President of the Delegation that the latter intended to go to Weimar, but it would be for the purpose of conferring with members of the Government when the Committees and Sub-Committees engaged on the study of the Treaty had completed their task.

WILL THE GERMANS SIGN?

In a message, dated Paris, Saturday, the Press Association's Paris Correspondent says:—While there is no confirmation, so far, from any official source of the story which has been current in certain quarters, that Count Brockdorff-Rantzau has ordered the German Delegation to pack up and leave for Berlin, it should be pointed out that the enemy plenipotentiaries are at perfect liberty to leave Versailles to consult their Government, if they choose to do so. It is not at all improbable that they will. Up to this afternoon, however, the Council of Four had received no intimation of the delegates' desire in this connection.

A much more interesting point is, whether they will sign the Treaty. The Allies are taking nothing for granted in this respect. This morning the Council of Four met at President Wilson's house, and discussed what steps the Allies would take in the event of a refusal to sign.

SHOUTING OF WAR.

According to a Press Association message, dated Berlin, Saturday, Herr Friedrich Hampfer, one of the correspondents who have returned from Versailles, writes in Vorwärts:—To-day I come from Versailles to shout into the ears of the sleepers that it is still war. Even if we sign, we are faced with a fresh chapter of the world war, and prowling destruction will take the place of roaring destruction. According to the Lokalanzeiger, the Ministers Landsberg and Giesberts will leave Versailles on Monday with some of the delegates.

The newspapers are particularly violent in their comments on the Peace Treaty's demand for 140,000 milch cows and other cattle. Vorwaerts heads the announcement as "Organised Infant Massacre."

The Tageszeitung exclaims: "Herod's infant massacre was child's play compared with the unparalleled shamelessness of this demand."

WHY THE TERMS ARE HARD.

HERR HARDEN'S OUTSPOKEN CRITICISM.

The Press Association's Special Correspondent at Berlin, telegraphing on May 10th, says:—Under the title: "The Hard Peace," Herr Maximilian Harden devotes a long article in the Zukunft to the Peace Terms. He says:—No delegation in twenty-three centuries has had such a sorry task as tragic and dismal as the duty laid on the German Delegation, of concluding peace with twenty-three nations in Versailles. Herr Harden, who remarks of M. Clemenceau that of all men assembled at Versailles he assuredly could not deny having willed the war, refuses to believe that M. Clemenceau, like Brennus, after his victory over the ancient Romans, wishes to show his mortal enemy that the vanquished have no rights, and are to be handed over entirely to the victors' good pleasure. Yet, continues Herr Harden, he is not content with the return of Alsace-Lorraine, for which he hardly dared to hope in his wildest dreams. He wants the Saar Basin; political, or at least economic, domination over the left bank of the Rhine, and a mountain of money. Germany cannot pay. Herr Harden does not believe that the German delegates will present Germany's position in a sensible way. He points to the advice given them—namely: "To refuse all hard conditions, and to give the proletarian parties of the Western Powers time for agitation in our favour, and save what seems capable of being saved." This advice, in Herr Harden's view, is the explanation of the "manifestoes issued at the Foreign Ministry's request by all kinds of associations of trades, professors, and preachers," of the Pan-German Memorandum, and the attacks on President Wilson. President Wilson would have been able to achieve much more, says Herr Harden, if you, and others like you, had not stubbornly remained on the side of unreason and injustice. Had you uttered only one energetic word against the devastation of Belgium, the exportation of men and girls; the rough and greedy destruction of the factories and machinery in Belgium and Northern France; had Germany, who declared herself to be a newly constituted State, given an expression through her Government organs, or at least through her public bodies,

THE IRISH-AMERICAN DELEGATES.

VISIT TO GALWAY AND MAYO.

EXCITING INCIDENTS AT WESTPORT.

ADMITTANCE TO THE TOWN REFUSED.

The Irish-American delegates—Messrs. Walsh, Dunne, and Ryan—after a busy morning in Dublin on Saturday, left in the evening to pay a visit to the West of Ireland. They intended to go to the town of Westport, which is a Special Military Area since the murder of Mr. Milling, Resident Magistrate, but before they left Dublin notice was served on them by the police that they would not be permitted to enter the town. They stayed in Galway for the night, and on Sunday afternoon, accompanied by a number of Sinn Fein members of Parliament, drove in flag-bedecked motors to Westport. They were stopped at the outskirts by the military, and were not allowed to go any further. After some exciting incidents, they re-entered their motor cars, and drove on to Castlebar, where they stopped the night. They will return to Dublin this evening, and leave for London on their way to Paris.

SCENES AT WESTPORT.

NO ADMITTANCE TO THE TOWN.

Our Westport Correspondent telegraphing last night says:—The expected visit of the American delegates here this evening has caused considerable stir, particularly among the Sinn Feiners. At a specially convened meeting of the Westport Urban Council yesterday a Reception Committee was formed of the members of the Urban Council, associated with whom were Mr. T. Walsh, Chairman of the Board of Guardians, Rev. R. Canavan, Administrator, Westport, and other priests, several members of the Harbour Board, and the larger traders of the town. This morning the military were active very early on all the roads radiating from the town; increased pickets guarded the boundaries of the military area, and only those with permits were admitted. Several armoured cars arrived and went to the boundary points on the Clifden and Louisburgh roads, over which delegates were likely to travel from Connemara to Westport. Armed pickets patrolled the streets, and after last Mass an armed picket with fixed bayonets prevented the people from congregating outside the church after they had come out from Mass. Some American soldiers home on leave strongly resented being obliged to move away, but beyond some heated interchanges between them and the soldiers forming the picket there was no resistance.

Up to this (9 p.m.), the delegates have not arrived, and a rumour is freely circulated that they will be turned back by the military at the boundary of the military area, as they are not provided with permits. Streamers span the streets with inscriptions "Welcome the Liberators." Sinn Fein and American flags are displayed from the windows of houses. There are large crowds on the streets, though the military pickets are patrolling the streets and are compelling the people to keep moving.

A contingent from Castlebar, with motor cars and bicycles, are held up by the military on the road between here and Castlebar, at the boundary of the military area. The military have pulled down and seized all Sinn Fein flags, but the American flags have not been interfered with.

ARRIVAL AT THE BARRIER.

A later message says:—

The delegates, Messrs. Walsh, Dunne, and Ryan, with their secretary, Mr. Lee, and accompanied by the Rev. Father O'Flanagan, John MacNeill, M.P.; R. Mulcahy, M.P., and W. Cosgrove, M.P., arrived at Knappagh, two miles from Westport, at 9 this evening. Here an armoured car was drawn across the road, and there was a force of military with fixed bayonets, in charge of a lieutenant. The three motors of the party drove right up to the barrier. Mr. Walsh informed the officer he had a diplomatic passport visé by the Embassy, given them at the request of Mr. Lloyd George and President Wilson. Sir William Wiseman, acting for Mr. Lloyd George, requested them to visit Ireland. The officer replied that he knew they were coming, but the place being under military control, his orders were that they could not go through to-night. Mr. Walsh said that they should not try to go in face of the machine guns, but he would like to know if he were the officer in charge. The lieutenant replied that the captain in charge was in the town. Mr. Walsh said that he would like to present his passport to the man in control to ascertain if there were any reasons why they should be put back. The lieutenant said that he would send for the officer in charge. Mr. Walsh asked if they had come out to meet them, or if it was the regular military zone, and the lieutenant replied that it was the regular military zone, and they stopped everybody there.

The lieutenant then despatched a cyclist to Westport headquarters with a message. While the messenger was away there were some exciting incidents. Mr. Cosgrove, M.P.; Mr. Mulcahy, M.P.; Father O'Flanagan, Professor McNeill, M.P., and the delegates were outside the barrier, while inside were a number of people from Westport. A large procession from Cushlough, headed by a banner in Sinn Fein colours and the Stars and Stripes, approached the barrier. The officer and soldiers, with fixed bayonets, met them, and called on them to ourn about, as they would not be allowed to go into the town. The leader of the procession asked what was going to be done with their friends from America, and cheers were raised for the delegates. The procession halted. The officer called on them to turn back, and the soldiers, with fixed bayonets, drove the people before them. A soldier tried to take the flag, but the man held on to it. Mr. Mulcahy and some others of the party followed in the wake of the procession, and Mr. M'Neill complained of the conduct of the soldiers. The officer said that they were not going to have flags waving there, and drew his revolver. The procession having moved some distance back the road stopped, and Mr. M'Neill and the other members of his party returned to the barrier.

Captain Owens arrived on the scene shortly afterwards, and the space at the barrier was cleared of all but the delegates. Mr. M'Neill was standing beside the delegates, when an officer ordered him back. Mr. M'Neill refused to move, holding that he was of the party. The officer ordered the soldiers to remove him. Mr. Walsh called the commandant's attention to the fact that it was Professor M'Neill. The commandant said to take him away, and Mr. M'Neill was put back at the point of the bayonet. The same was done to the others who were standing outside, except Father O'Flanagan. The delegates, in consultation with the commandant, produced their passports, and when the consultation ended, they informed the reporters that they were refused admission to the town, but they declined to express any opinion on the proceedings. The whole party then entered their motors, which had Sinn Fein and American flags, and proceeded across the country to Castlebar, where they are to stay to-night. They return to Dublin to-morrow morning. The party from Westport, having returned with the news of what had occurred, the crowds on the streets gradually dispersed. There was no disturbance. The streamers that spanned the streets, bedecked with Sinn Fein and American flags, were cut down by the military.

RECEPTION IN GALWAY.

PROSPECTS OF A REPUBLIC NOT SO CERTAIN.

From the time the delegates crossed the bridge of Athlone on Saturday until the reached Galway at midnight they found bonfires blazing all along the railway line, and torchlight processions to bid them welcome at every station. At Athenry they were presented with an address of welcome from the Sinn Fein Club, and as the train steamed into Galway fog signals were exploded, and a large muster of Irish Volunteers drawn up outside the rails came to the salute, while the pipers' band of the Cork University hurling team which is in Galway for Fitzgibbon Week, could be heard at intervals in the tumultuous cheering discoursing national airs.

Addressing a great gathering from the steps of the Railway Hotel, Mr. Michael J. Ryan said that they held out no illusions to the people. Their hearts were saddened when ringing in their ears were the exultant shouts of an expectant Ireland as the chalice of liberty was raised to its lips, and yet they knew that possibly it might not be given to Ireland's sons to drink the draughts of freedom. But they meant to do their utmost in Paris to ensure that the plighted word of America should be kept to the suffering, downtrodden, freedom-denied peoples of the earth, and that the Irish should not be the only people denied the right to freedom. The Celts, whom The Times had rejoiced to see leaving Ireland, had been true to the old land, and were to-day ready to speed the day of her deliverance. He looked forward to the day when under the form of government, that the people had freely chosen, the nation's industries would flourish, her towns cease to decay, when the genius of her sons should be given full play, and when her children should go forth to conquer as they had ever done.

Rev. Michael O'Flanagan, who had accompanied the delegates, said that, if the result of America's entry into the war were to be merely to help one side in the balance of power in Europe, the conscience of that great land would be haunted until the wrong of Ireland and other small nations was righted. If England had to deal five years ago with the Ireland with which she had to deal to-day, it seemed to him that the first of the small nations that would have achieved her freedom in Europe would have been Ireland. The great opportunity that came to the Irish people went by, the Irish people did not awaken with sufficient rapidity, and now all that was left was the second best. I do not wish, continued Father O'Flanagan, that any false hopes should be kindled in the breasts of the Irish people, because no man is going to say whether we are going to succeed within the next few months or the next few years, but we are going to make the best possible use of such opportunities as we have, and whether we succeed, or whether we have to wait for some years longer, we belong to a race that has fought for seven hundred and fifty years, and we are not going to faint by the way, when so many generations continued to fight in the days far darker than these.

THE AMERICAN FLAG.

He proceeded to say that the Irish people had a right to endeavour that the American flag should be carried without stain, when a voice called out: "Who burned the American flag in Galway when America came into the war?"

"If it was burned," said Father O'Flanagan, "we shall have to get a new one for to-morrow."

"It was never burned in Galway" retorted an angry voice, and there were interruptions from the outskirts of the gathering, during which a woman was heard to shout: "Go back to your bishop."

Father O'Flanagan went on to say that before long the Irish Republican flag would float without any rival from one end of Ireland to the other.

Before the meeting commenced four military officers who wanted to gain the door of the hotel would not be permitted to pass the cordon of Volunteers. It was subsequently learned that an ex-soldier, who was alleged to have raised the cry about the American flag, had to be attended for wounds received in the face.

After early Mass at the Jesuit Church on Sunday morning, where special seats were provided for them, Messrs. Walsh and Ryan motored to Tuam. Mr. Dunne remained in Galway to receive an address from the Urban Council. The address called attention to the evidences of past greatness in the city, and the present ruin and decay that were the concomitant of outside domination.

In his reply, Mr. Dunne, who received a tremendous ovation, the audience standing and cheering for several minutes, said that they had found that the Republican form of government was the best possible for human beings. Before they came to Ireland they noticed, despite the Censored Press, how the Irish people yearned for self-government. They did not presume to dictate to Ireland what form of government her people should choose, but, apart from whatever views there might be in the past on Home Rule or Colonial Home Rule, or other forms of freedom, three-fourths of the Irish people at an election held under a hostile Government had now declared for a Republic. He quoted Mr. Lloyd George's declaration on self-determination made on the 5th of January of the year when the elections took place, and said they had come across to tell the British Premier that Ireland had self-determined for a Republic. He did not want to create illusions, but Ireland was in her travail, and, unless he was very much mistaken, a new Republic would be born before very long in this grand old land.

Mr. L. O'Dea, solicitor, President, Sinn Fein Club, and Mr. S. O'Hara, M.P., also spoke.

Mr. Fahy, M.P., and Father O'Flanagan addressed an overflow meeting, the latter complaining that the address from the Urban Council was not in Irish.

In the afternoon the delegates left for Carraroe en route for Westport.

VISITS TO MOUNTJOY PRISON AND TO ARCHBISHOP WALSH.

During Saturday the Irish-American delegates visited the Sinn Fein prisoners in Mountjoy Prison, and they were received later by Archbishop Walsh, who, referring to the scene at the Mansion House on the previous evening, when the military were called out to assist the police in their effort to arrest an escaped prisoner, is reported to have said that they had on that occasion "an experience of the kind of government under which we are living in Ireland."

THE DAIL EIREANN.

A private sitting of An Dail Eireann was held on Saturday morning at the Mansion House, Dublin. The proceedings were brief, and at the adjournment at 10.45 a.m. the following statement was issued to the Press:—

The Deputies met this morning at the Mansion House, and after the transaction of routine business unanimously resolved to adjourn to attend the reception of the American Commission by the Dublin Corporation at the City Hall at 12 o'clock noon.

The Bishop of Truro, Dr. Burrows, announced at the Truro Cathedral last night that he had accepted the See of Chichester. Dr. Burrows has held the Bishopric of Truro seven years, succeeding Dr. Stubbs.

TRANSATLANTIC FLIGHT.

NO FLYING FROM ST. JOHN'S

AMERICAN SEAPLANES CONTINUE THEIR JOURNEY.

There will be no flying from St. John's to-day, says a Reuter's telegram on Sunday. The weather continues adverse. Hawker secured this morning from the steamer Digby the case containing his new wireless equipment, and took it to his hangar to arrange for the installation of the apparatus on his machine.

A report from Trepassey says that the American airmen are resting after yesterday's flight. Mechanics from the repair ship Prairie are overhauling the engines of the seaplane NC1, which arrived yesterday with its machinery seriously heated. American officers expect the NC4 to-morrow, and hope to make the flight to the Azores in the latter part of the week. Air flight experts aboard the American cruiser Chicago to-day selected Quidividi, where the Martinsyde aeroplane is located at the aerodrome, for the descent of the American dirigible, to prepare for the arrival of which the Chicago came here to-day. This machine, which is a small craft of the type known in England as a "Blimp," carrying a crew of five or six men, is expected about the middle of the week, and will descend at this ground. It will be towed out of the way of the aeroplane, and will then refill its balloon with gas, and when the American airmen at Trepassey decide to start, will proceed there to join them and make the flight across the Atlantic in company with them.

THE FLIGHT OF THE SEAPLANES.

Reuter's Agency is informed by the American Committee of Public Information that, according to a message received from the United States on Saturday, the American seaplanes NC 1 and NC 3 left Halifax for Newfoundland at 12.7 p.m., Greenwich mean time, on their second lap of the Transatlantic flight.

A Reuter's telegram from Halifax on Saturday says:—The United States Naval seaplane NC 3, which started to-day on the second lap of her flight from Rockaway Beach to Newfoundland, returned to Halifax Harbour at 11 a.m. with engine trouble. The NC 1 is continuing her flight. It was learned later that the N.C. 3 was forced to return on account of propeller trouble, after a flight of fifty miles along the eastern coast of Nova Scotia. The seaplane was moored to the mothership, Baltimore, was quickly fitted with a new propeller, and was soon ready to start again. Members of the crew stated that they found the flying conditions ideal.

A message from Trepassey says—The N.C. 1 arrived at 3.41, Halifax time. A thirty mile north-west wind aided the seaplane towards the end of the journey. It was escorted to Trepassey by a naval scout plane, which went to meet it from the base here. The actual flying time from Halifax was six hours and 54 minutes.

The seaplane, N.C. 3, arrived at Trepassey from Halifax at 3 p.m. The airmen report that they had an uneventful voyage, but encountered strong beam winds the whole way. Despite this, the seaplane kept an average speed of about eighty miles an hour.

THE THREAT TO BUDAPEST.

Telegraphing from Vienna on May 9th, the Press Association correspondent says:—Reports from Budapest show that the Rumanian advance seems likely to prove the death blow to the Revolutionary Government in Hungary. The downfall of the Bela Kun Cabinet is believed to be only a question of a few days. According to reports from reliable quarters, Bela Kun is preparing to hand over the reins of government to the Moderate Socialists, but he is anxious to ensure this being done without bloodshed, and also to secure the immunity of his principal followers from any attempted revenge on the part of the bourgeoisie. The leader of the new Socialist Government will probably be M. Garani, who was Minister of Commerce in the Karolyi Government, and is described as a capable and trustworthy man. M. Garani is at the present moment in Switzerland. Failing him, M. Boehm, who is now Commissioner for War in the Bela Kun Cabinet, might be Chief of the new Government.

Intense anxiety prevails regarding the possibility of effecting a change in Government without great disorders. Bela Kun, himself, has absolute control of the people, but whether his successor could restrain them from wreaking terrible vengeance upon the bourgeoisie is thought to be extremely doubtful. In any event, the continuance of the present conditions beyond the next few days is regarded as absolutely impossible.

The Government is completely panic-stricken, and is resorting to the most extravagant and insane methods to save the situation.

SPECIAL EXTRA.

BRITAIN AND AMERICA.

In a leading article, discussing Britain and America, the Daily Telegraph refers to an interview with Lord Reading on his return from the United States, and says:—Every word that he has to say on Anglo-American relations deserves careful attention, and we are specially glad to see that he reduced to its proper proportions the talk which has been current in certain quarters about the revival of anti-British feeling in the United States. We all know where those quarters are to be found, and the sort of sentiment which prevails there. The extreme Irish-Americans are busy again, and eager to magnify the importance of the gentlemen now touring Ireland under the auspices of Mr. de Valera and the Sinn Fein Republicans. We do not suppose that any other Government in the world but the "Brutal" Government of Great Britain would tolerate such a gross abuse of its safe conduct, but as nothing but hostility is expected from this quarter, its recrudescence has occasioned no surprise.

THE RUMANIAN MARCH ON BUDAPEST.

A Times telegram, dated Berne, Friday, states that the Rumanian Bureau learns from Vienna that as the result of the intervention of the British and American Missions, the Rumanian Army has been obliged to cease its march to Budapest.

LICHNOWSKY AND RUPTURE OF NEGOTIATIONS.

Prince Lichnowsky (says a Press Association Berlin telegram), in a letter to the Tageblatt, says that Germany should in no circumstances accept the Peace Treaty, and that he considers a rupture of negotiations the only right tactics.

COUNCIL OF FOUR AND THE LATEST GERMAN NOTES.

To-day (says a Press Association Paris telegram of Sunday) there was neither a sitting of the Council of Four nor of the five Foreign Ministers; consequently the Council of Four will not settle until to-morrow the terms of the the replies to be sent to the two fresh Notes which Count Brockdorff-Rantzau sent yesterday to M. Clemenceau. Mr. Lloyd George, who left Paris for Fontainbleau on Saturday evening, has not yet been made aware of these Notes, but President Wilson has read the text, which M. Clemenceau took to him.

MISS CAVELL'S "TRIAL."

The Times Correspondent at Brussels writes:—A lady, who was sentenced the day before Miss Cavell's execution to a long period of imprisonment on the charge of helping Allied soldiers hidden in Belgium to cross the frontier, tells me that at one moment, knowing that Miss Cavell was suspected by the Germans, she warned her against lodging any more of the men who were being brought to her. At first Miss Cavell was inclined to accept her advice, but hearing that a number of men had been caught and shot near Mirson, and that others were still hidden near Cambrai, she at last replied:—"I must go on, for if one of those poor men is taken and shot, it will be my fault. I cannot condemn any of those men to death by refusing to take them in."

BRITISH AEROPLANE ARRIVES AT MADRID.

A Reuter's Madrid message says that a British aeroplane, with ten people on board, and two French machines, each with four passengers, arrived on Sunday at the "Four Winds" Aerodrome near Madrid.

RUSSIAN AFFAIRS.

AN ADVANCE ON PETROGRAD.

The Special Correspondent of the Press Association and Daily Telegraph, writing from Copenhagen on Sunday, says, according to a report from the Special Correspondent of the National Tidende in Stockholm, great military preparations are being made at Helsingfors, which is expected to be the concentration point for an expeditionary force, 50,000 strong, whose object is to be an advance on Petrograd. No details as to the composition of this force are given, but French cruisers are already lying off Helsingfors and Hangoe, while, according to other messages reaching here, an English squadron of twenty cruisers and destroyers is expected to reach Helsingfors shortly. Helsingfors, it is stated, is living practically under martial law. All foreigners have been ordered to leave the city. According to Russian newspapers discontent in the Bolshevist Army is increasing rapidly. Five regiments have mutinied, and amongst the commissaries drowned is Trotsky's private secretary.

Colonel Dulak Halakonts, the leader of the Russian Volunteer Corps, has announced his intention of attacking Petrograd.

A telegram from Petrograd, received in Stockholm on Saturday, says that the entire male population of several important cities, including Petrograd, born between 1886 and 1890, has been called up.

EASTER AT DROMAWIER.

Easter on the wrinkled rocks that circle Dromawier—
The golden day's at morning, in the morning of the year.
Easter brings the honied gold and fragrance to the whin;
Again the cuckoo's calling; and the swallows have come in.

The great brent geese, in squadrons grey, are trooping to the North;
To-night they'll be in Scotland, to-morrow cross the Forth.
The peewit and the curlew now will seek a further shore;
God's feathered choir at daybreak proclaims 'tis Spring once more.

There's gold upon the water, and fine gold on the hill;
All the Lough shore is ablaze from Rome's to Moville.
The glory has come back to earth—here! and here! and here!
The day Spring's risen on healing wings this morn at Dromawier.

THE IRISH-AMERICAN DELEGATES.

DUBLIN MUNICIPAL RECEPTION.

STATEMENT BY THE LORD MAYOR.

A special meeting of the Dublin Municipal Council was held on Saturday, in the City Hall, for the purpose, as set forth in the summons, of "welcoming to the City of Dublin the Hon. Frank P. Walsh, Edward F. Dunne, Michael J. Ryan, and P. Lee (Secretary), the delegates' mission appointed by the great Irish Race Convention, held in Philadelphia on 22nd February last, to the Peace Conference; and, further, for the purpose of expressing approval of, and wishing God speed to, their efforts for Irish freedom."

The Council Chamber was fully occupied by members of the Dail Eireann and their friends, so that the identity of the members of the Council was almost lost in the throng of "strangers." The delegates were accommodated with seats well to the front, and beside them sat Mr. De Valera. Amongst the ladies present were Countess Plunkett, Madame Markievicz, Mrs. Sheehy-Skeffington, Mrs. Power, and Mrs. Connery.

The Lord Mayor (Alderman L. O'Neill) presided.

The Lord Mayor said that the object for which this special meeting of the Corporation has been summoned was to give the members of this Council, as representatives of the citizens, an opportunity of extending to their friends from America, who had honoured them with their presence, a sincere welcome to this city. In the world of to-day the United States occupied a position of great power and a peculiar position of great influence amongst the nations of Europe. Their friends came from that country whose motto is "Liberty" and "Equality." They came from that country with a mandate to the Peace Conference, to see justice done to Ireland, and, above all, to see that Ireland was not left once more upon the "dissecting table" of an alien Parliament, and made a pawn in the game of Imperial politics, and to see that this ancient nation, after the many efforts it had made to regain its lost freedom, was not going to be baulked again. Only a few short months ago, when the Irish people were threatened with a new aggression on their rights as a nation, they turned to the United States as the grand trustee of democratic principles. (Hear, hear.) In this momentous hour of need and hope the Irish nation again turned to their kith and kin in America and Australia to sustain and see justice done, and that Ireland was not once more ignored among the nations of the world. That appeal had not been in vain. The gentlemen whom the Council was welcoming represented millions of the Irish race, and in greeting them the Council greeted America with unqualified joy. In extending to them a sincere welcome, they wished to show how dear the Republic they came from was held in the Irish heart, and how high, and with what respect, Ireland held its representative at the Peace Conference, as the statesman who stands conspicuously before the world as the champion of wronged peoples. (Hear, hear.) And, gentlemen of the delegation, continued the Lord Mayor, it is because we are conscious of a complete unity of purpose with you, based upon an identity of State ideals, that we venture to extend a welcome to you, as our people glow as you do with the passion of an inexhaustible faith in liberty and justice. Outside of the deep personal regard we have for you, as men who have always been found in the vanguard for the demands of Irish liberty, we cherish you for yourselves. We venerate you owing to the country you have come from, and the people you represent. (Applause.)

The Lord Mayor then referred to the long associations between Ireland and the United States, and concluded:—You, gentlemen, have come with a message of hope, you have come with the most solemn duty to see that this country is not going to be ignored at the Peace Conference. And for that reason it would be ungenerous of us, as representing the capital of this country, if we allowed this opportunity to pass, even though it be somewhat late, without extending a sincere welcome to you, and to express the hope that the mission, entrusted to you by the Irish Race Convention, will be a success, and wishing a God-speed to your efforts on behalf of Irish freedom. (Applause.)

The High Sheriff proposed a resolution heartily welcoming the delegates, and wishing them "the greatest success in their efforts for the freedom of our native land." The delegates came with a message of hope, and were entitled to a special token of welcome and gratitude.

Mr Moran seconded the resolution and said that they welcomed the delegates because they came from a great country which at great sacrifices had secured Home Rule, and whose President he regarded as the greatest champion of democratic ideals modern times had produced. The Government of this country was alien in habits and in ideals, and inferior in intelligence, and one whose standard of morals was shockingly low compared to that of Ireland.

Mr. P. T. Daly said that he welcomed to this country the delegates who came to do their best in obtaining recognition of one of the fourteen points which the President of America had put before the world as the cardinal principle for the recognition and the re-establishment of peace. The delegates were the sons of men who had in days gone by loved this country. Anybody who was at the Mansion House yesterday would realise the desire of the British Government to prevent the people of Ireland from doing anything wrong. Perhaps it was to honour the delegates or to show the way they stand for freedom, for democracy, and particularly for small nations. No matter how they bullied, they would not bully the Nationalist spirit out of Ireland, and he wished the delegation to bring that message back to John Devoy.

ALDERMAN KELLY.

Alderman Thomas Kelly said that a British official a short time ago had described the Sinn Fein Party as a multitude of needy individuals such was the superior British mind. Their experience on Friday afternoon of British officials afforded proof that the people of Dublin were needy, and greedy as well, for the liberty that helps to make up the prosperity of metropolitan cities all over the world. He wished the delegates would take a walk by the quay side, and look at the Dublin Custom House, and consider the ideas of the men who planned and built it, and the trade for which it was intended. Before it was finished the need for it had passed away, because the conqueror had taken possession, and it was converted into a mere money-changing office. The Government proclaimed assemblies, because, as they said, they feared they were likely to give rise to grave disorder. Well, the delegates had seen the people assemble and demonstrate, and heard their acclamations, and he put it to them to say if in their wide experience, they had ever seen a more orderly or well-disposed class of people than they had met in Ireland. (Applause.) It was to him a proud thing to be a member of the Dublin Corporation—that Corporation which, in 1775, passed a resolution congratulating a brave Englishman, the Earl of Effingham, because he had refused to draw his sword in the American War against a people who were rightly struggling to be free. (Applause.) Their guests that morning had been in Paris in order to get a hearing for Ireland at the Peace Conference. They were going to carry out their mission as far as men could do, and he hoped that they may be successful. (Applause.)

Mr. John Ryan supported the motion in a brief speech.

The motion was then put, and was carried with acclamation.

MR. RYAN.

Mr. M. J. Ryan, responding on behalf of the delegates, said that they regarded everything that had been said as some slight token of recognition of their Irish kindred beyond the seas. He was one of the dreamers. America had been the greater Ireland, and from that greater Ireland, the delegates (who were the sons of Irish exiles), came to them with a message of hope. All that they could do would not pay the debt which America owed to Ireland. Two great principles had made America great—religious liberty and the protection of American industries. It was because of the triumph of these two principles that America had wrested from England the control of the markets of the world. This Sinn Fein movement, like other movements, passes through three stages. One was the stage of sneer and ridicule. The second was the fighting stage and the stage of vindictive opposition, and the third was victory. Sinn Fein had experienced two of these stages; and he was sure it would experience the third. This Irish movement was indestructible. It was the longest of battles. The spectacle which the delegates looked on yesterday was a strange one—a Parliament sitting and yet not in control of an inch of ground. Not a square mile of territory owed it allegiance. To any other people but the Irish such a position would be anomalous. This Irish Republic of theirs was as yet a thing of the spirit, but it was certain to conquer. (Hear, hear.) As the mighty Cæsars fell before the Apostles of old so shall fall before them the might of England. The delegates held by no illusions; they spoke for their race, and the utmost they could say—and they said it with confidence—was that their race did not propose to falter. They were not going to have it written willingly that the Irish were the only white race in all the world to whom liberty would not be given. He believed the people of the United States meant when they entered the war that all people would have the right to determine for themselves the government under which they lived. "You," said the speaker, "are working that out in the most splendid of ways. You have determined in the most logical, philosophical, and lawful, even, of methods that the Government under which you have hitherto suffered shall no longer be yours." (Applause.) Concluding, he said he looked upon the future as glorious. Ireland, which had dowered the world with its genius, would realise their dream and be a pathway of commerce between both hemispheres. (Loud applause.)

PRESENTATIONS TO THE DELEGATES.

Mr. P. Little said that some citizens of Dublin desired to present to the American delegates something that they could take home with them as representing Irish art. The spirit of a nation, he said, lived in its art, as in its daily life. They sought out something that in the United States would typify in the various galleries in which he hoped it would be exhibited some of the national aspirations of Ireland. They had selected a painting by Mr. Keating, which was at present being exhibited in the Royal Hibernian Academy. He hoped the delegates would accept the gift at the close of the exhibition.

Mr. T. K. Woods said that they had been commissioned by a small group of Irishmen, as representing the Dail, to purchase the work, and to present it to the delegates as a token of their respect and esteem. The title of the picture was "On His Keeping," which typifies an incident in the struggle that had gone on for seven hundred years.

Mrs. Sheehy Skeffington, on behalf of the Irishwomen's Franchise League, presented an address of welcome to the delegates.

Mrs. Connery spoke of the struggles and sufferings of the women in the cause of Ireland, and bade all to remember that the motto of the Women's League was "No Compromise." (Applause.)

Madame Markievicz introduced a deputation from Cumann na mBhan, representing, she said, 50,000 women, old and young, and including girls who had joined in the fight.

Miss Nancy Power read in Irish an address from that society of women.

Mr. E. F. Dunne, replying on behalf of the delegates, said that they all recognised the power of women. In Ireland he was told that three-quarters of the women were in favour of a republican form of government. But the authorities of Dublin Castle were so sure of the sentiments of Irishwomen in reference to the Irish cause, so certain that they were loyal to the republic and disloyal to the Empire, that only yesterday, in presence of himself and his colleagues, they desecrated the privacy of the first lady in Ireland in the Lord Mayor's Mansion for the purpose of discovering, as they believed, the presence of a man who was loyal to Irish interests. That act alone was a greater tribute to the loyalty of the women of Ireland than anything that himself or his colleagues could say. (Applause.)

The proceedings then terminated.

BOLSHEVISM IN RUSSIA.

DEBATE IN THE ABBEY THEATRE.

Mr. Smith Gordon presided at a debate on "The Truth about Russia" in the Abbey Theatre last night. There was a good attendance. The principal speakers were Mr. Sergeitch, Socialist and Democrat, and a member of the Russian Liberation Committee, and Miss Sylvia Pankhurst.

The Chairman said that he hoped that the truth about Russia would not turn out to be as various as the lies about Russia. Mr. Sergeitch would present the case as seen by those not in sympathy with the Bolshevist movement, and Miss Pankhurst would present it as seen by those in sympathy with that movement. They were there that night to find out how far the lessons of Russia were applicable to this country.

Mr. Sergeitch, in his address, said that, in order to explain the present state of Russia he would have to give a short sketch of what its condition was some time ago. Why was Tsarism so hated in Russia? It was mostly the fault of the Government of the Imperial régime. The Government was not well balanced between the people, there being a decided preponderance in favour of the privileged classes; also the Government would not tolerate any criticism. The country was being governed by a Government which was not authorised by the people; in fact, the Government was ruling a muzzled country. All the revolutionary parties were considered by the Government as illegal parties, and they were looked upon as existing simply for the purpose of receiving punishment. These revolutionary parties had the sympathy of the people, a fact which was further demonstrated in all the great Russian writers being revolutionaries. Coming to deal with the present, Mr. Sergeitch said that from 1914 the people were at one with the Government to oppose Germany, but after two years the people were worn out, as, besides Germany being blockaded, Russia was also blockaded. Then the abdication of the Tsar took place, and the Provisional Government was formed from the members of the Duma. Against them the Soviet Government was formed. The former were for carrying on the war, and the latter for peace. After a time the Soviet Government gained the majority, and the Provisional Government was overthrown. Thus the Bolsheviks came into power. The question was whether the Bolsheviks had come into power to revive the disgraceful abuses of the old régime. Under Bolshevist rule, large amounts of money were paid to workmen in factories, from which there was no production, with the result that the country was flooded with paper money. The speaker gave examples of the way in which food was divided in Russia as between the Red Army and the civil population. They had now the Bolshevists as one part of the people, and the whole proletariat against them. At the time of the revolution the whole of the people were with the Revolutionists, and now nearly the whole of the people were against the Government. Leaving out Poland and the Ukraine, the population of Russia was now 120,000,000, and a census taken by the Bolshevists showed, on their own figures, that the Bolshevists numbered 300,000. The latest prices in Russia were:—1 lb. potatoes, £21; eggs, £2, sugar, £21 per lb., and boots, £120. They could see how hard it was to live in Russia. Proceeding, the speaker referred to the statues in Sackville street, and said that they represented people who had fought for their country. That would not be allowed in Russia. If men even spoke of the rights of the people and the responsibility of the Government, they would be fired on at once, or, at the best, put into prison. He had seen the children and grown-ups playing games in the Phoenix Park, and it was a happy sight, but not for him, as the Russian children did not run about and play, because they were starving. The speaker then gave a list of figures from the official papers of the Bolshevists of the executions that had taken place. Concluding, Mr. Sergeitch said that if they loved democracy and freedom, if they were for the rights of people in other countries as in their own, they would condemn the Bolshevists. (Cries of "No, no.")

Mr. Sergeitch—Then you are not for democracy and freedom. (Applause.)

MISS PANKHURST'S VIEWS.

Miss Pankhurst replied to Mr. Sergeitch, and stated that he was not correct in some of his statements. The people of Russia had asked for a peace of no annexations and no indemnities, the people to decide their Governments for themselves. If Britain had accepted that at that time peace might have then been secured, and she might have been spared trying to enforce the peace, "which, when you really come to look at it, is a disgrace to us all." (Applause.) Having compared conditions in Russia and in Ireland, Miss Pankhurst said that the Soviet Government was the new form of government which was coming all over the world. (Applause.) The idea was now cherished by the workers of all lands. It was that all human beings should live on the same economic level, and that a very high one. After 1920 no children in Bolshevist Russia would work until 20 years of age, but would be finishing their education. Some 20,000 schools had been established by the Bolshevists, who were going to erect the finest system of education in the world. Production had increased in those districts where the Soviets had got a chance, and there was everywhere a great determination and a great pride in making the workers' paradise. (Applause.)

A discussion followed, in which a number of the audience took part.

of repentance for these crimes, and repudiated the guilty persons, then President Wilson would have had a weapon against Belgian and French hatred, which is the most understandable of any in history. Germany can only proclaim her own rights when she has, with courageous dignity, confessed the wrong committed by her. Because not a word or regret, or of readiness to atone, came from the head of our Republic, the peace will now be hard. He who rejects it stands before the judgment seat of the nations. A clear answer is due from him to the question: "What has he done to prove to the world the birth of a new spirit in his Fatherland?" Herr Harden incidentally remarks that the naval blockade, which is given the disgusting name of hunger blockade, is, as everybody must know—and even the war jurist, Kriege, always admitted it—a military method permitted by international law, the mildest ever applied, and the application of which was always regarded as inevitable, and which Great Britain was willing, in 1907, to renounce. It only remained applicable in 1914 because seven years previously, at the Hague, Germany secured the defeat of the motion for its abolition.

ONLY ONE ANSWER.

Sunday's Paris Figaro writes:—Count Brockdorff-Rantzau's Note deserved only one answer—that which M. Clemenceau gave on behalf of the Allied heads of Government. The reply is perfect in form, as in substance, and will be unanimously approved in Great Britain, France, America, and Italy. The Allies are grimly resolved to oppose a wall of brass to all Teutonic protests and manœuvres. The Germans will only sign when they are forced to sign, and they are quite determined, at the first opportunity, to wriggle out of all engagements they have undertaken.

The Echo de Paris says:—The German Delegation is wasting its time in drafting an entire counter Treaty. When May 22 arrives, no doubt a date will be fixed by which Germany must accept, or reject, en bloc, all articles of the Treaty. To get the better of Germany, and to end to our advantage the European schism, twenty-five years of close union between France, Britain, and America are necessary. May this union be definitely announced in a Note by M. Clemenceau, affirming the determination to impose the Peace Treaty without delay.

The Petit Journal says:—Count Brockdorff now knows, if he wants to do useful work, in what sense he should direct the labours of his collaborators. Only from this standpoint can it be said that he has not wasted any ink in writing his two Notes.

A Paris telegram, dated Saturday, says—The newspapers this morning endeavour to discover from various Government manifestoes and comments published in the Press what attitude is really being adopted in Germany with regard to the preliminary treaty.

The Petit Parisien states—It seems that the Cabinet at Berlin is especially endeavouring at the moment to obtain permission that oral procedure may be substituted for procedure by written communications.

The Matin writes—The Germans will confine themselves to setting up against the Allied Treaty what they call, with remarkable impudence, a peace of justice. The Germans are crying out very loudly, but their defence is as weak as the Peace Terms are moderate.

Germany is pretending to be angry, therefore our peace is a good one, argues the Petit Journal, adding—The Germans are writhing in the last fit of frenzy. They feel to be escaping from them for ever that white peace which, for want of a Ludendorff peace, they had hoped to be able to secure.

The Gaulois says—Strong as the terms of the Treaty are, they do not strangle the German nation, but merely dash to pieces the mad dreams of domination which Germany's rulers cherished for nearly half a century.

FEELING IN BERLIN.

POSSIBLE POLITICAL DEVELOPMENTS.

The week of national mourning begins in Prussia to-day, says the Press Association's Correspondent, in a message dated Berlin, Saturday. All picture palaces and theatres will be closed, and no concerts will be permitted, unless of a nature suitable to the situation. This order of the Government is meant to recall the Berliners' minds from the wild pursuit of pleasure to the gravity of the hour. This morning's papers print many columns of protests against the peace terms, from all parts of the country—from political associations, municipal corporations, the Federal Governments, and the like. The various parties are calling meetings to demonstrate against the signing of the Treaty in its present form, and everything is being done to impress the nation with the harshness of the conditions. Meanwhile, in externals, Berlin life is going on as usual, but as soon as one speaks with responsible people one finds this to be little less than a mechanical continuation of a routine which no one has the energy to stop. Men go to business as usual, but if one speaks to them, one finds them paralysed by the prospects which the peace terms open up. Humbler folk are also troubled, but say that they must accept the terms to avoid starvation by the blockade. Business men are oscillating between the ideas of acceptance and rejection, and see no possibility of Germany's giving way. They say that they must continue to buy food and raw materials in order to exist, and that it is impossible to do this, and also to pay the indemnities demanded. The latter, they assert, is more than ever impossible, with two of the principal industrial regions lost through the peace. The starvation, or emigration, of millions would make the payments even more impossible. The only possibility of the fulfilment of the conditions, it is urged, would lie in the intense labour and penurious living of all classes for decades to come, but the German workmen, demoralised by the war and the revolution, and filled with the idea of the easy time to be attained through the revolution, are to-day the last class whereof this can be expected. A few people are clinging to the desperate hope that it may be possible to convince the Entente of the impracticability of carrying out the conditions. All classes urge bitterly that the terms are incompatible with Dr. Wilson's programme. The territorial terms are points the significance of which everyone can grasp, especially those relating to West Prussia. Next to this Upper Silesia is causing perturbation.

THE GOVERNMENT'S POSITION.

Persons who generally know more than gets into newspapers tell me that it is quite possible that the present Government will voluntarily resign its position, and that the Independents will try to get enough Majority Socialists with them to form a purely Socialist Government, with Herren Kalisky, Cohen, Reuss, Hasse, and Breitscheid, etc.—the last-named, perhaps, as Foreign Minister.

A semi-official denial issued to-night merely says that no negotiations are on foot towards the Independents entering the Government. The Independent Press alone emphasises the necessity of accepting the terms at all costs, as did Herr Hoffmann also yesterday in his declaration for his party in the Prussian Assembly. These say that they, too, regard the terms as unjust, but would accept them as the Russians accepted the Brest-Litovsk terms, in the confidence that a proletarian world revolution will within a couple of years sweep the whole fabric away. That the Independents are capable of organising the life of the country efficiently, and in a way to enable them to fulfil the terms, must seem a chimerical idea to anyone who knows the tenor of their propaganda up to now. It would seem, from all appearances, that unless we are willing to make to an Independent Government enormous concessions that we are unwilling to make to the present Government, it would probably mean an unstable and inefficient régime as a brief prelude to utter collapse. With regard to the internal political situation in Germany, new developments as a result of the peace terms may alter all the party plans and programmes. An interesting test of strength is to be expected between the new political group—the so-called Young Democrats—and the more conservative and traditional wing of the party in the National Democratic Convention to be held in Cassel from May 28th to May 30th. The Young Democrats held a meeting in Berlin at the end of April, and have been busy since working out a programme to present in opposition to the recently published party executive programme. One or two prominent North German Democrats are already in favour of it, and I happen to know that a number of the leading South German Democrats are also in favour of a more radical programme. Typical of this phase is the recent utterance of Herr Bereniano in favour of the Soviets within certain limits. An effort is now being made to get all these groups into line to collaborate at Cassel, and to induce the party to adopt a programme of trenchant taxation, the acceptance of Soviets and a Labour Chamber for certain matters, in collaboration with a general Parliament, and the abandonment of the principle of the appointment of a certain number of Ministers in proportion to the party's strength. I learn that none other than Prince Max of Baden, without having been in touch with the group that recently met in Berlin, has a book nearly ready for publication, advocating just these points. A member of the group tells me that he is convinced that many of the best among the younger intellectuals of the country are going over to the Independents, simply out of disgust with the temporising indecisiveness of the other parties. His own group, for instance, is anxious for the incorporation, as it could promise fruitful democratic development in accord with the special circumstances. The Democratic Party has admittedly disappointed its followers in both directions so far. It will be interesting to see the results of the conflict in the party convention.

PROBABLE CHANGE IN THE GERMAN DELEGATION.

The Press Association Special Correspondent in Berlin, telegraphing on May 11th, states that a telegram from one of the German Correspondents at Versailles says:—Herr Legien, the German Labour Leader, is leaving for Berlin, and Herren Landsberg and Giesberts will leave to-morrow, in order to make a report to the Government. The Correspondent adds—It is possible that a change will be made in the composition of the delegation. Leaders of all parties will state their view of the Peace Terms at to-morrow's meeting of the National Assembly. The speakers will also include representatives of the six districts which are threatened with severance from Germany, and Professor Quidde. The Government's programme for the meeting will probably be got through in one day, after which the plenary sitting would adjourn. The Government of the State of Gotha declares that it will not order a day of national mourning because it does not share the Imperial Government's bitter disappointment.

COUNT BROCKDORFF OVERCOME.

Count Brockdorff-Rantzau, says a Versailles message, dated May 10th, has asked his colleagues to expedite their examination of the Peace Treaty. The translators are labouring at high pressure, while the typists are working in two shifts, one by day and the other by night. Last night 40 of the 120 typists worked until 4 in the morning. Count Brockdorff-Rantzau himself worked until a late hour. It is hoped that the examination of the first part of the treaty by the Germans will soon be finished. Count Brockdorff-Rantzau will then leave for Berlin to confer with his Government. During the evening yesterday the Germans sent to the Central Telegraph Office a large number of telegrams, which were transmitted by the Eiffel Tower wireless station. Another 25 persons are expected to join the German delegation to-morrow. They will be accommodated at the Vatel Hotel. Nine officers on Colonel Henry's military Staff, who have moved out to make room for the newcomers, will be housed at the Hotel des Reservoirs. Count Brockdorff-Rantzau's Secretary is busily engaged in reading the British papers, the majority of which criticise the chief of the German delegation for having remained seated while he read his speech at the presentation of the peace terms. Translated extracts from those papers are read very attentively by Count Brockdorff-Rantzau. Interviewed on this subject, his Secretary attributed the apparent rudeness of his chief to the fact that Count Brockdorff-Rantzau was master of his voice, but not of his knees. In fact, he explained, the Count had sufficient strength of will to control his voice, but he was fearful of his strength to remain standing.

PRESIDENT WILSON AND FIUME.

A Press Association message, dated New York, Saturday, says: The correspondent of the Associated Press at Washington says that despatches to the White House characterise as an absolute fiction the reports from Paris that Dr. Wilson is committed to ceding Fiume to Italy after 1923. It is added that it would appear that the President does not deviate from his original stand.

ITALIAN PRESS OPINION.

The whole Press, without exception, says a telegram from Rome, expresses the profoundest regret for what is occurring in Paris. After remarking that the exclusion of Italy from the mandates, the insertion of clauses stipulating that the Peace Treaty is valid, even if signed only by Germany, France, Great Britain, and America; the reorganisation of the former Austrian Empire under the form of a Danubian Federation, and the exclusion of Italy from the new Military Alliance, will force Italy to seek her friends elsewhere, the Idea Nazionale adds—The new Treaty, besides crushing Germany, crushes the Italian victory.

Senator Prassati, writing in the Turin paper, Stampa, describes the Peace Terms as "Italy's Diplomatic Caporetto," and requests the Government to enlighten public opinion.

The Tribuna sadly admits that the League of Nations does not prevent the country from seeking other allies.

The Naples paper, Mattino, considers that Italy's exclusion from the new Alliance, destined to enforce peace, leaves her free to adopt a new policy.

THE JUGO-SLAV POSITION.

Reuter's Belgrade Correspondent, in a message dated 4th May, says:—The Jugo-Slav National Council at Zara has sent the following telegram to President Wilson:—"The Jugo-Slavs of the town and commune of Zara, comprising 28,000 out of a total population of 36,000 of the commune, and half the urban population, are deeply moved by the energetic defence of our oppressed people against the Imperialistic ambitions of Italy, and express their feelings of everlasting devotion and deep gratitude to Your Excellency and the American people."

The National Council of Fiume and Susak have also sent a telegram to President Wilson, which reads as follows:—"With complete confidence in the great champion of liberty and justice, we send you a warm request to be so good as to frustrate the aspirations of Italy to a town which is ethnologically, geographically, and economically Jugo-Slav, and get it ceded to the Kingdom of Serbs, Croates, and Slovenes." The same Council addressed similar telegrams to Mr. Lloyd George and M. Clemenceau.

Telegraphing on May 6th, the Correspondent says:—A mass meeting of citizens of Belgrade was held in the open to-day, and unanimously passed a resolution expressing gratitude to President Wilson for having, by his declaration at the Peace Conference regarding Fiume, defended the rights of the Jugo-Slav people, and affirming the desire of the Serbian people to live in friendship with Italy. "If this is not the case," the resolution declared, "we shall be compelled to defend, by all means in our power, the districts of our nation unjustly claimed by Italy." The resolution has been telegraphed to President Wilson and to the British, French, and Italian Governments.

BRITISH AND FRENCH COLONIAL TRADE.

During this morning's session of the Franco-British Commission, says a Press Association message dated Paris, Saturday, the problem of maritime transport was discussed. It was urged that all measures should be taken, so that the British and French Colonies should make use of their commercial fleets to the fullest extent possible for the export of colonial products, and the import of home merchandise. It was also urged that British merchants in French Colonies, and French merchants in British Colonies, should be placed on the same footing as regards the exports of their products, the tonnage being divided according to the stocks available, without regard to the nationality of the owners of the stocks, particularly in the case of goods bought by the Allies' Revictualling Commission. On the other hand, with a view to facilitating the extension of colonial production, by assuring it the best possible conditions of removal, it was recommended that rates on colonial products destined for a home market should be reduced as much as possible, a corresponding increase being made, if necessary, in the rates on goods imported into the African Colonies. The British delegates advocated the creation of a Franco-British Committee, composed of merchants with interests in Africa, to study more particularly the means of securing for France and Great Britain the adoption of identically worded Bills of Lading, and establishing the responsibilities of shipowners, as is done in the United States and Germany. The Conference will continue its work on Monday morning and afternoon, and on Monday evening, when it will have concluded its labours.

GERMAN SALES OF AEROPLANES FORBIDDEN.

General Nudant, on behalf of the Allied Governments, says a Paris telegram, has informed the German Armistice Commission that all sales of German aeroplanes to foreigners is forbidden, and has demanded that immediate steps be taken to put a stop to such sales.

THE AUSTRIAN FRONTIERS.

Saturday's Paris Matin states that the Council of Five has adopted the conclusions of the Commissioners on the subject of the frontiers of Austria, but that a plebiscite will probably be allowed for the Klagenfurt district of Carinthia.

DENMARK AND SOUTH SLESVIG.

The Rigsdag will finally decide the attitude to be adopted towards the proposed plebiscite in the third or south Slesvig zone, says a message, dated Saturday, from Copenhagen, in a secret sitting to be held on Monday. But it seems evident from the Press discussion that the Government has the main body of public opinion behind it in being averse from giving the German populated zone of South Slesvig the opportunity to vote itself into Denmark, on the impulse of momentary economic considerations. The dangers and disadvantages inherent in the acquisition of a considerable German element by Denmark are strongly emphasised.

TO SAVE BELGIUM.

A Reuter's Brussels telegram of yesterday says:—A demonstration here by the League of Patriots to affirm the determination of the Belgians to secure a peace guaranteeing independence and the restoration of their country has sent a message to the King expressing disappointment at finding the country obtaining neither guarantees nor reparation. Indemnities were insufficient. The message asks the King to save Belgium.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

MR. GLADSTONE AND SIR JOHN MAHAFFY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—With reference to Lord Blyth's letter, the actual phrase used by Browning in the Ode from "Agamemnon" appears to have been, not "in belly's strict necessity," but "at belly's strict command." This, however "horrid," is at least metrical. Headlam, in his prose version, gives "under stress of appetite."—Yours, etc.,

CLERICAL INCOMES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—All will acknowledge that many clergymen at the present moment are in dire financial straits. The assets of the Church of Ireland have increased by over two and a half millions since 1873. The man-in-the-street wants to know why, out of this large increase, a substantial sum should not be immediately applied to meet the present distress. The Church may in the past have been wise in putting by nest-eggs, but, now that the rainy day has come, the eggs should be taken out of the nest and relief should be given to those in need. Fifty thousand pounds should be at once allocated out of Church funds to deal with the emergency. If the Representative Church Body can lose one hundred thousand pounds in Russian securities without a financial feather being knocked out of it, surely it can afford to spend half that sum in tiding some of the almost starving clergy over the present crisis? To alter slightly a well-known couplet, let me say in conclusion—

Ill fares the Church, to hastening ills a prey,
Where wealth accumulates and men decay.

—Yours, etc.,

HENRY V. MACNAMARA.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—It is clear that the question of augmentation of clerical stipends will have at least some place in the approaching General Synod. As a body, we are all grateful to those who have advocated the cause of the underpaid clergy—and I might say we are all that—but I submit that there is no use in repeating from year to year that the scandal exists, and then offering a dole here and there towards alleviating the misery. Most of us feel that until the archbishops and bishops, acting in conjunction with the Representative Church Body, have the courage to launch a great scheme, and one worthy of the Church of Ireland, no satisfactory result will be attained. The matter is too urgent to be again treated as a side issue. The future of the Church depends upon it.—Yours, etc.,

THE DESTRUCTION OF SALMON.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—"Boniface," in his important letter in a recent issue, points to the progressive falling away of salmon in the great Shannon system. The ruin of this once valuable national asset is all the more deplorable that both the cause and the remedy are fully recognised—indeed, have been so any time these twenty years.

The Parliamentary Commission of 1901 found that the cause of the failure of salmon in our Irish waters was due to the insufficiency of the fry output of the natural spawning beds; and, further, that this insufficiency was largely due to the reduction or elimination of the natural beds by the drainage schemes carried out at the public cost in the interests of agriculture. Nowhere was the effect so pronounced as in the Shannon system, naturally the finest salmon waters in these islands. Wanting the ideal spawning grounds previously furnished by the extensive tracts of currentless water, the spawners were forced to resort to the small streams, where they and their spawn fell an easy prey to enemies of all kinds.

Anything like adequate protection of such a spawning system would obviously entail a prohibitive outlay, even at the former low rates of wages. Hence we find the Departmental Committee of 1917 blankly concluding that no such protection was practicable. Thus the magnificent ranges of the Shannon salmon waters, once teeming with fish, have long lain fallow, like fertile land wanting only the sowing of the seed.

It has long been known that salmon hatcheries, worked on the necessary scale, are capable of supplying the "seed" in any quantity required, and that American experience of some thirty years has proved to demonstration that rivers "depleted of salmon by poaching or other causes" can be restored to full productiveness by their means. So convincing were the American official returns even in 1901 that the Parliamentary Commission of that date recommended the immediate establishment of salmon hatcheries in Ireland at the public cost as the appropriate remedy.

To come to the present: some two years ago the Limerick Board of Conservators, who have charge of the Shannon system, went very closely into the whole question. They were unanimous in pronouncing that the need could only be met by the immediate establishment of hatcheries, thus giving effect to the recommendation of 1901. On their part the Irish Fisheries Department had reached the same conclusion, as stated by Mr. Duke, then Chief Secretary, in reply to a question of Mr. O'Shaughnessy, M.P. Mr. Duke added that, recognising the urgency of the need for the immediate establishing of the salmon hatcheries, he had applied for funds for the purpose. It was implied that at latest on the conclusion of the war the matter would be pushed forward without delay.

There, incredible as it may appear, the matter rests, while enormous sums are being expended in unemployment donations. Here, ready to hand, is a work of reconstruction capable of at once giving employment and such a return for the very moderate outlay needed as it would be difficult, indeed, to secure in any other work.—Yours, etc.,

CHARLES V. HICKIE.

POSTAL WORKERS' CONFERENCE.

STRIKE ATTITUDE DEFINED.

The concluding session of the Postal and Telegraph Clerks' Association was held at Blackpool on Saturday.

Mr. F. A. Riley, Executive Committee, presented a supplementary report on the question of a strike policy. He said that on a recent occasion, when a strike of the Triple Alliance seemed probable, the Committee considered the position, and accepted the following as a statement of their policy:—(1) Our members must not do the work of strikers; any case of doubt as to what constitutes such work shall be decided by the Executive Committee, in consultation, if necessary with the trade union concerned. (2) As regards the handling of tainted goods, any question which may arise must be dealt with at the time, in view of the particular circumstances of the case, and in consultation, if necessary, with the particular cases of the unions affected.

Mr. Walker (Leeds) thought that they ought to define their attitude with regard to the military and the police, in case of a dispute, being used by the Executive Government. "I want it to be thoroughly understood," he continued, "that we object strongly to a State force being used to cow and bully another section of State servants." (Cheers.)

The report was unanimously adopted.

In the course of speeches by fraternal delegates, Mr. Nally, of the Irish Post Office Clerks' Association, stated that progress was being made in Ireland, and to-day the percentage in the service who were non-members did not reach double figures. (Cheers.) They in Ireland wanted amalgamation.

Amongst the subjects dealt with relating to conditions of work, which the Conference asked should be remembered, was that relating to the bulk system of dealing with registered packets.

Mr. Owen (Manchester) said that the question of compensation for the loss of registered letters was merely an act of grace. No one could make a claim for any registered letters that went astray. "That will be surprising information to the bulk of the public," he said, "and it is a point which should be impressed on Chambers of Commerce."

The resolution, asking for the abolition of the bulk system, was carried.

The delegates entered a strong protest against the treatment of night telephonists, and it was urged that their poor pay and long hours led to unrest in the postal service.

Mr. Nobbs (Executive) said that they would use all the machinery they had to amend the matter.

Other matters having been discussed, the Conference concluded.

CHURCH MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

The offertories in St. Aidan's Parish Church, Dublin, at both Services yesterday, were in aid of the Church Missionary Society. The Archbishop of Dublin preached in the evening from John x., 16—"Other sheep I have which are not of this flock," and dealt with Christian missions from the point of view of the teaching of the text, and with the growth of the missionary spirit, as well as with problems which faced the Church that tries to bring the truth to all men. The Church Missionary Society was especially dear to the hearts of all Irish Churchmen. There was something in the ardour of its agents, and something so contagious in the zeal with which they worked that it made an appeal in Ireland which he did not think any other Society made.

A Brussels telegram, dated Saturday, states—The People reports that near Eisden on the Dutch frontier a Dutch sentry fired on two Belgian soldiers walking unarmed along the frontier. One was mortally wounded. Belgian and Dutch military authorities are inquiring into the affair.

INCREASED PRICE OF SILVER.

A Reuter's New York telegram of Saturday says:—Silver advanced to-day on the removal of restrictions and the heavy demand from India, China, and Scandinavia.

RECENT LIMERICK STRIKE.

AN ENORMOUS LOSS TO THE CITY.

The Limerick Chamber of Commerce have issued a statement in reference to the recent city strike. The strike, the statement says, commenced on the 14th ult., when all work ceased in the city, with the exception of the railway service. Ships, owing to want of labour, had to leave the port to discharge. Had the workmen consulted with the Chamber before declaring a general strike, joint action could have been taken and the city saved from a disastrous event of the sort.

The directors of the Limerick Chamber of Commerce estimate that the loss, directly and indirectly, to Limerick caused by the strike to be £42,000 in wages and £250,000 in loss of turn-over, in addition to permanent loss of trade, which cannot be valued in money.

RELEASE OF TYRONE SOLICITOR.

Mr. J. F. O'Hanlan, solicitor, Omagh, after undergoing three months' imprisonment in connection with a speech delivered in Dungannon, was on Saturday released from Derry Jail. He jocularly remarked on leaving that he told his comrades to keep the cell in order until he returned.

THE DUNGARVAN SHOOTING CASE.

Since the bullet was extracted from the young fisherman, Michael Walsh, who, it is alleged, was shot by the policeman McCarthy at Ballinagoul, Co. Waterford, he has been making excellent progress, and his medical attendants now have every hope of his coming round.

ARRESTS IN THE PROVINCES.

Patrick Noonan, farmer's son, Ardvillane, Tipperary, has been arrested under martial law at Shrough, near the town, and brought under military and police escort to Cork for court-martial. No charge has so far been preferred against him.

Yesterday a man named Berrills, Williamson's place, Dundalk, was arrested by the police and handed over to the military. He was conveyed to the military barracks, where he is still detained. No charge was preferred against him. As he was being escorted from his residence Berrills was cheered by a large crowd which collected.

ATHLONE COUNCIL AND DISPERSED MEETING.

At a specially convened meeting of the Athlone Urban Council on Saturday evening, a resolution was passed condemning the action of the authorities on the previous Monday night on the occasion of Mr. Ginnell's proclaimed meeting; asking the Lord Lieutenant if he was responsible, and, if not, if he would be good enough to say who was.

CLAIM FOR DAMAGE TO MILITARY PROPERTY.

The military authorities have lodged a claim for compensation for nearly £2,000 for the alleged malicious burning of hay at the Athlone Military Barracks on May 5th, the night on which Mr. Ginnell's meeting was broken up by a bayonet charge.

SCENES AT KERRY COUNTY COUNCIL MEETING.

Lively scenes took place at the quarterly meeting of the Kerry County Council arising out of a letter from the County Surveyor, Mr. Singleton Goodman, intimating that he was desirous of retiring, but asking the Council to fix his superannuation before handing in his resignation.

Mr. O'Callaghan said that the Catholic County Council of Kerry always treated their Protestant officials well, and instanced the case of Mr. Coyle, where the Local Government Board cut down the pension they allowed.

After a heated discussion, the motion to consider the superannuation was carried by eleven votes to ten. The Chairman left the chair as a protest, and it was taken by Mr. Nolan, the mover of the original proposition, who now moved that the superannuation be fixed at £700. A scene of great disorder followed. Ultimately Mr. Foley re-took the chair, and declared the meeting adjourned without doing any further business.

COLLECTING WITHOUT A PERMIT.

Sergeant Torney said that he understood that it was their intention not to recognise the Court.

Andrew Mahon, Thomas Meyler, James Wall, and James Kelly were fined 30s. each, and John Mahon 10s.

ASSOCIATION.

IRISH FOOTBALL ASSOCIATION.

ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual meeting of the Irish Football Association, Limited, was held on Saturday night in the Molesworth Hall, Molesworth street. Mr. Wilton (Derry) presided, and there was a full attendance of the Council, but the number of delegates present was much smaller than usual. The annual report stated that in membership of the Association there were 261 clubs, as against 259 the previous year. Dealing with the Irish Cup competition, it was pointed out that for the semi-final, played in Dublin between Shelbourne and Linfield, a new record in receipts for a semi-final had been established, the "gate" being £822 9/6, while a record for any match in the competition was the outcome of the replay at Belfast, the receipts amounting to £1,057 19/3. The receipts for the Victory International Match at Windsor Park, Belfast, were £1,533 16/9, while the War Charity Match realised £1,100, which had been forwarded to the Ulster Volunteer Force Hospital and Prisoners of War Fund.

The Chairman proposed the adoption of the report, and in the course of a lengthy discussion which ensued reference was made to the playing of extra time in the Cup Match between Linfield and Shelbourne at Belfast. Several delegates questioned the authority of the Emergency Committee, who had managed the competition, contending that the management of the competition was vested in the Senior Protests and Appeals' Committee, and after the matter had been fully discussed it was acknowledged by Mr. M'Aachey that a mistake had been made, that the Emergency Committee had no right to take control of the competition, and that the mistake had been going on for the last five years. A long debate followed on a proposal to recommend the Council to grant £300 to the Munster Association in order to enable that body to "carry on," and also to grant £100 of the Association's funds to Glenavon for the purpose of enabling that club to enter the Irish League again next season, it being pointed out that Glenavon had furnished more recruits to the Army than any other club in Ireland, with the result that it had had to be practically disbanded. The recommendation regarding the Munster Association was rejected, but the proposal to recommend the grant to Glenavon was approved of, while the Council were recommended to grant £50 to the Secretary of the Leinster Association for work done for the Irish Association.

The following recommendations were also passed:—"That the Council take into consideration the question of distributing a sum not exceeding £1,000 to clubs that have suffered financially through the war, and that a Special Committee be appointed to consider the matter." "That this meeting recommends to the Irish Football Association the desirability of appointing a Commission to consider ways and means of spreading the game of association football throughout Ireland." "That this meeting recommends that the rentage of grounds by the Irish Football Association be increased from 10 to 15 per cent. on the net amounts of gates, same to cover all incidental expenses in connection with the match." "That it be a recommendation to the Junior Council to play juvenile internationals with England and Wales, and that only players of the Junior Cup standing be eligible to take part in them." The financial statement showed the Association to be in a flourishing condition, there being £2,021 3/11 in bank to the credit of the Association, while the assets all told amounted to £2,118 6/9. The balance carried from April, 1918, was £665 2/9, and the excess of income over expenditure for the year ended 10th April, 1919, was £1,233 4/-. Several alterations in Articles of the Association having been agreed to, and the reports having been adopted, the meeting closed with a vote of thanks to Mr. Wilton for presiding.

LINFIELD v. SHELBOURNE.

Four thousand spectators were present at Shelbourne Park on Saturday for the match between Shelbourne and Linfield. The latter were without several of their usual team, but were strongly represented. The match was played under conditions that did not favour a fast game, the grass being much too long and heavy, but it was, withal, a fine game. Linfield enjoyed much the better of the play in the first half, but their forwards, though they displayed smart form, could make no impression on the home backs and goalkeeper, and ends were changed without either team scoring. Shelbourne reversed matters in the second half, Linfield being seldom dangerous, and a goal scored by Nicholl after fifteen minutes' play sufficed to give them what was a meritorious victory. Result:—

Shelbourne ... 1

CLIFTONVILLE v. ULSTER.

The counter-attraction at Ringsend spoiled the attendance at Dalymount Park, where Cliftonville defeated Ulster by 4 goals to 2. In the first half the Belfast team had two-thirds of the game, and were leading by 2 goals after ten minutes' play, Robinson scoring both. Nearing the interval Ulster improved, and Jones reduced the lead. Ulster played up strongly on resuming, and M'Clinton equalised. To near to the finish the match was well contested. M'Cracken gave Cliftonville the lead again, and Larmour placed the issue beyond doubt by scoring a fourth. Result:—

Cliftonville ... 4
Ulster ... 2

LONDON MONEY MARKET.

Bank Rate (changed April 5th, 1917) .... 5 p.c.

LONDON, SATURDAY AFTERNOON.

After some experience of tightness during the week, the Loan market has completed the seven-day period in a more comfortable fashion, owing to Government disbursements; and the rate for call loans to-day, after opening at 3 per cent., fell back to 2½ per cent., with balances rather exceeding requirements at the finish. Weekly loans were quoted at 3½ per cent. Well over half a million was disbursed in dividends, chiefly upon the shares of Vickers, Ltd. The Discount market remained narrow and reserved. Business in bank drafts is very trifling, with three months' paper posted at 3¼ per cent. and six months' at 3⅝ per cent. June Treasury bills were offered at 3½ per cent. and Julys at 3½ per cent.

DISTILLERS COMPANY, LTD.—An extraordinary general meeting of the Distillers Company, Ltd., was held at their registered offices, 12 Torphichen street, Edinburgh, on Friday afternoon, when Mr. W. D. Graham Menzies, Chairman of the company, presided. In moving the adoption of the resolutions that the capital of the company be increased from £2,250,000 to £2,500,000, the Chairman said:—As you are aware, this is an extraordinary general meeting of the shareholders called for a specific purpose—to pass certain resolutions, having as their object the increase of the capital of the company, and, therefore, I do not propose to deal with any matters which may be more properly brought under your notice at the usual annual meeting, to be held here two months hence. At the outset, I wish to set at rest all doubt as to the intentions of your directors, and to say that there is no proposal to raise more capital for cash or to distribute more shares in the form of a bonus as was done so recently. The present shareholders, therefore, are not to participate in any shape or form in the fresh issue of shares now proposed to be made. I mention this at once, as a considerable number of shareholders have already written the Secretary on the point. The last increase in the company's capital took place in September, 1917, but that was only giving effect to the issue of bonus shares above referred to. The previous increase in capital which was necessitated by the extension of the company's business was carried through on 7th January, 1904, over fifteen years ago. The number of shares then authorised to be issued was 25,000, the same number as is now proposed, and these shares have been utilised from time to time to pay for businesses which the directors considered it advisable, in the interest of the company, to acquire. The margin of shares left unissued is only 1,300, representing the nominal capital unissued as £13,000. I might just refer to the rumours which have gained some currency in the Press recently as to a scheme being on foot to amalgamate about a dozen of the largest whiskey firms in the country, and in which this company's name was associated. I cannot speak for the authenticity of such a rumour in regard to other firms, but this much I can say, that no formulated scheme for such a combine has ever been before this Board, and, while any such proposal would undoubtedly receive full and fair consideration, this is not a matter which your directors would ever dream of carrying through without putting the whole position before the shareholders for their approval. What your directors have in view at present is something much less ambitious—viz., to carry out the policy we have so successfully adopted in the past with your approval. An opportunity has presented itself of acquiring the whole of the share capital in the Preston's Liverpool Distillery Co., Ltd., Liverpool, and a provisional agreement has been concluded with their directors, subject to the consent of their shareholders. That company has devoted itself entirely to the production of industrial spirits, and the acquisition of its shares will, therefore, strengthen our hold of this branch of the trade. Your directors were also approached some considerable time ago with the view to the company's taking an interest in the old established firm of John Haig and Co., Ltd., Markinch. These negotiations have only now been consummated on terms satisfactory to this company. It may be recalled that this firm were the original proprietors of Cameron Bridge Distillery, this being one of the distilleries which was merged into the company at its formation in 1877. At that time the partners agreed to retain the blending and distributing part of the business in their own hands, but their successors are now anxious to be freed from their responsibilities, and considered this company was the natural outlet through which to dispose of their interests. The consideration to be paid for these two businesses involves, inter alia, the issue of 10,000 Ordinary and 4,000 Preference Shares of this company, and for that reason the present increase in the authorised capital is necessary. This will still leave a margin of 12,300 shares unissued. The motion was seconded, and carried unanimously. A vote of thanks to the Chairman for presiding brought the proceedings to a close.

FINANCIAL PARAGRAPHS.

Marconi International Marine.—The new shares, to the number of 600,000, of £1 each, are to be paid for at the rate of £1 each on or before the 24th instant. The necessary form has been issued to shareholders, and it may be as well to reproduce the statement made by the directors in the circular issued on April 5th last, to the effect that they contemplate that at the ordinary general meeting to be held in a few weeks' time, they will be in a position to recommend upon the then issued capital the payment of the same dividend (10 per cent.) as was recommended by them and approved by shareholders at the last ordinary general meeting.

Extraordinary meetings of the British-American Tobacco Company will be held at the Central Hall, Westminster, S.W., on 19th instant, at the first of which a resolution will be proposed altering the articles of association, and at the second to consider a motion in regard to the issue of Ordinary Shares. By the latter it was proposed that 141,000 unissued Ordinary Shares shall be allotted at £2 each to certain directors of the company and the President of the Export Leaf Tobacco Company on each one entering into an agreement, and that of the rest of the unissued Ordinary Shares 2,131,773 shares shall be offered to the members on the register of Ordinary shareholders on 5th June, 1919, and the holders of share warrants to bearer for Ordinary Shares on the same date in the proportion of one share for every three existing Ordinary Shares held at the price of £1 per share payable to one of the bankers of the company in London on the acceptance of the offer on 15th August, 1919.

WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW.

Markets over the week show no special developments. Industrial production lacks staying power, and leading commodities are readily absorbed, although in no direction is there a disposition to stock speculatively or too far ahead. Values remain on a firm basis, but, all the same, carry little confidence. Numerous and many very big promotion schemes are in contemplation, entailing a fabulous amount of capital, should they be successful in materialising. The regular London tea auction sales (after being suspended since June, 1917) were resumed last week. Fine and medium grades of Indian realised high rates; averages worked out at 10d. to 1/5½ for pekoes; broken ditto, 1/1½ to 1/9½; orange pekoes, 11½d. to 2/10, and broken ditto 1/3½ to 3/1½. Competition was active for fine Ceylons also; broken pekoes, 1/2 to 1/5½, and broken orange pekoes 1/3½ to 1/8½ per lb. A comparatively small catalogue of Java tea was adversely affected, generally marking an irregular drop of 1d. to 3d. per lb. as compared with Indians, in view of the announcement of the Chancellor of the Exchequer that British grown tea would have a preferential rebate of 2d. per lb. from June next.

The Archbishop of Dublin will institute the Rev. W. L. Jameson to the Incumbency of the parish of Balbriggan in the parish church on Saturday, the 24th inst., at 3.15 p.m.

The first meeting of the Board of Nomination for the parish of St. Kevin's, Dublin, will be held to-day at the Diocesan offices.

The parish of Finglas will shortly be vacant owing to the retirement, through ill health, of the Rev. A. W. Ardagh.

The Rev. Canon Campbell, who was well-known in connection with St. George's Church, Jerusalem, has remembered his native Diocese of Down and Connor. He left by will the sum of £5,000 for additional clergy for Belfast. He also left a third of the residue of his estate to the Cathedral Building Fund, another third to supplement the £5,000 already mentioned, and the remaining third to the S.P.G.

THE GENERAL SYNOD.

Mr. J. B. Fowler has given notice of his intention to move the following resolution at the meeting of the General Synod:—

That this Synod respectfully requests the attention of the bishops who are on the Council of the Divinity School, T.C.D., to the Manual of Prayer Book instruction, "The Tutorial Prayer Book," and requests them to use their influence to have it placed on the Divinity Course.

The suggestion is to substitute the book in question for "A New History of the Book of Common Prayer, revised and re-written by Walter Howard Frere, M.A., Priest of the Community of the Resurrection," a revision of "Proctor on the Prayer Book," which was in use some years ago in the same school.

EX-CHAPLAINS' FELLOWSHIP.

A meeting of clergy of the Church of Ireland who have served with the Forces during the war will be held at 37 Dawson street, Dublin, to-morrow, at 8 p.m., to consider the advisability of forming an Ex-Chaplains' Fellowship. The Rev. Canon King will preside, and all demobilised chaplains are invited to attend.

LAYMEN'S MISSIONARY MOVEMENT.

ADDRESS BY DR. HODGKIN.

The annual meeting of the Irish Laymen's Missionary Movement was held at the premises of the Presbyterian Association, Grafton street, Dublin, on Friday evening, Mr. Charles Eason, M.A., J.P., presiding.

Mr. J. M. Mussen, Secretary, read the fifth annual report, in which the Executive Committee stated that the hostel for Oriental students in Dublin ceased to exist in July. The house had been taken for a six months' experiment, and at the end of that period it was given up. There were then no Indian students in Dublin, the Long Vacation having commenced, and since then changes had taken place in the regulations respecting courses for law students. The report of the hostel showed a deficit of £50 15/4. As the result of the issue of that report, additional subscriptions were sent in, so that in the end there was a credit balance of some £16. Late in the year an effort was made to reach men through the medium of the Press: three short articles were written by a member of the Executive Committee for publication in the Irish Times, and were afterwards re-printed in several other papers. The Committee had co-operated with the missionary societies in the establishment of a Foreign Mission Supply Association. The house 18 Kildare street had been taken by the Association, and would shortly be opened as a central depôt. The Committee had felt the importance of getting into closer touch with the Y.M.C.A., and Mr. Henry O'Connor, Secretary of the Association in Dublin, had consented to join it. Among other questions that had been considered by the Committee was the proposal to have a house under inter-denominational control, as a meeting ground for those interested in foreign missions and kindred objects.

The financial statement showed a credit balance of £22 16/4.

The Chairman, in moving the adoption of the report, said that they were very much indebted to Professor Trench for his articles in the Irish Times, and he thought that it was a pity that they had not had more of them. Having referred to matters dealt with in the report, he said that with regard to their work generally, he did not think that they had done as much as they would have liked to do in increasing interest in foreign mission work, especially among the men, in the various Churches, and the Committee would be glad at any time to have suggestions which would help them.

Professor Trench, who seconded the motion, said he thought that a house under inter-denominational control as a meeting ground, such as had been suggested in the report, would further one of the missionary objects which they had before them, and that was what he might call inter-denominational fellowship.

Mr. Charles E. Jacob said that sixteen societies had given their adherence to the establishment of a Foreign Mission Supply Depôt.

Mr. W. M. Elliott said that he thought it ought to be made clear that Red Cross societies were not being transferred to missionary societies, but voluntary effort from members of the Red Cross who were interested in missionary work was asked on behalf of missions.

The motion was passed.

The election of President, Vice-President, and members of the Executive Committee having taken place,

Dr. Henry T. Hodgkin, formerly medical missionary in China, delivered an address on the subject of "The Place of Foreign Missions in International Reconstruction," in the course of which he dealt with the main purpose of the missionary movement, and went on to say that everyone realised that the question of international relationship was one of intense importance. Before the war a great many people thought that foreign politics should be left to professional diplomatists, but to-day everyone was interested in foreign politics because the question had been brought home to everyone by the war. To his mind, they must seek to recognise and develop the fundamental interests in reconstruction, and the missionary movement set out to make a new world by making new men. What they wanted specifically was to seek, as early as possible, re-establishment of full international co-operation in the missionary movement. That movement must be inspired with genuine sympathy towards national aspirations, and towards the national point of view. He was not referring to these matters politically. The missionary movement was becoming a great educational force. They also needed to emphasise co-operation in all the Churches.

DUBLIN MORAVIAN MISSIONS.

A special foreign missionary service was held in the Moravian Church, Lower Kevin street, Dublin, yesterday morning, at which a large congregation was present. The preacher was Rev. T. L. Clemens, formerly of Tobago, West Indies, who gave a very interesting account of the work done on the various mission fields in Africa, Australia, Thibet, Labrador, Alaska, California, Surinam, Demerara, Nicaragua, and the West Indies. Stress was laid on the need for increased support for missionary work, and an appeal made for contributions. At the conclusion of the service a collection was taken up on behalf of the missions.

HIBERNIAN BAND OF HOPE UNION.

The usual monthly meeting of the Executive Committee of the Hibernian Band of Hope Union was held at 35 Molesworth street, Dublin, last Tuesday. The chair was occupied by Mr. George Grandy, and there were also present:—Messrs. J. Hubbard Clark, J.P.; F. T. Eason, J. Marshall Butler, J.P.; G. W. Dench, J.P.; P. J. Morton, J. J. Irwin, J.P., and Miss Burns. Apologies were received from Messrs. George Elliott, J.P.; Wm. F. Hogg, and Miss Pomberton. The financial statement having been presented and adopted, the acting Secretary (Mr. J. T. Huggard) reported that the Musical Festival Sub-Committee had now made final arrangements for the holding of the peace musical festival in the Round Room, Mansion House (by kind permission) on Saturday evening, 24th May. Vocal solo items would be contributed by past prize-winners, and there would be special tableaux, action songs, etc. Choruses would be sung by a united choir of about two hundred children. As all the expenses of the festival were being defrayed by private subscription, the crush in obtaining admission (experienced in former years owing to the delay caused through checking amusement duty tickets) was not anticipated this year. It was also reported that the first examination of the Temperance Education Board was to be held in the various centres arranged on Friday, 9th inst. A large number of day school pupils were entering in the Dublin section. A vote of sympathy with Dr. Robertson, of Clontarf, on the recent death of his wife was passed in silence.

A "WELCOME HOME."

An interesting function took place last Thursday evening in the Large Hall of Wesley College, St. Stephen's Green, Dublin, kindly lent for the occasion. The Dublin Methodist Council, acting on behalf of the various Methodist Churches of Dublin and the surrounding townships, had arranged for a "Welcome Home" to the demobilised members of the Rolls of Honour of those churches. It was not considered practicable to await complete demobilisation of the different British Armies, in view of the uncertainty as to the date on which such demobilisation will take place, and it is the Council's intention to organise a similar function later on to welcome those members still serving with His Majesty's Forces. About 250 guests assembled on Thursday evening, including parents and wives of the returned warriors. Tea was provided at 6.30 p.m., the arrangements being in the hands of Miss H. Crawford, Mrs. McCullagh, and other ladies. The hall had been tastefully decorated with the flags of the Allies, palms, etc. After a pleasant social hour, Rev. W. R. Budd, President of the Council, expressed the welcome of the Methodist churches, and during the course of the evening Rev. W. A. Bracken and Mr. R. Morgan, J.P., also gave appropriate addresses. Lieutenant F. M. Laird and Dr. E. Fannin responded on behalf of the guests. The great success of the evening was much added to by a musical programme, the contributors being Madame Alicia Keogh, Miss M. Attwooll, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Deale, Mr. T. A. Kirby, and Master W. Bailey.

The Federated Seamen's Union has declared a maritime strike on the coast of Queensland owing to the shipping companies having refused the seamen's demands in connection with the risk of pneumonic influenza. The strike is likely to spread through the whole of Australia, and involve 6,000 seamen. All seamen are being withdrawn from inter-State vessels as they arrive at Queensland ports.

ROYAL INSTITUTE OF ARCHITECTS OF IRELAND.

THE NEW HOUSING BILL.

An extraordinary general meeting of the Royal Institute of Architects of Ireland was held at 31 South Frederick street, Dublin, on May 8th. The President, Mr. Kaye-Parry, F.R.I.B.A., occupied the chair. Amongst those present were:—Captain Mitchell, Professor W. A. Scott, Messrs. R. C. Orpen, L. O'Callaghan, Edwin Bradbury, A. E. Murray, R.H.A.; F. Hayes, J. Mitchell, etc., and H. Allberry, Hon. Secretary.

The amended articles of association and by-laws were unanimously confirmed and adopted, and now become operative. Until December 31st next, with the sanction of the Board of Trade, such persons as have attained the age of thirty years, and are employed by a practising architect or by Government or public authorities, and can satisfy the Council that they have received adequate architectural training and experience, and are engaged in duties solely or mainly connected with professional practice, are eligible for election as members without presenting themselves for the studentship examination.

At the conclusion of the extraordinary general meeting, a statutory general meeting was held. The action of the Council in voting a donation to an Irish architect's widow in necessitous circumstances was confirmed. The President stated that applications were still being received from architects desiring to submit designs in connection with the urban housing competition, and that he hoped the response from the profession would be worthy of the prizes offered.

The Hon. Secretary reported the action that had been taken to safeguard the interests of the public and of the profession under the Housing of the Working Classes (Ireland) Bill. The meeting expressed satisfaction at the clause in the supplemental regulations issued by the Local Government Board on May 5th, in which it is laid down that all housing schemes should be prepared by competent architects, and that where a local authority may have in their employment a properly qualified engineer or surveyor the plans may be prepared by him, with the assistance of a competent architect.

It was considered desirable to take further steps to secure, as far as possible, that, in the event of persons who are not members of a recognised architectural body being so employed, their professional qualifications shall not be determined solely by departmental inquiry, as occurred in the case of the Labourers (Ireland) Act, 1906.

CONCERT AT THEATRE ROYAL.

A largely-attended concert took place in the Theatre Royal on Saturday afternoon, "in aid of a deserving Dublin charity." The programme was a generous one in regard to length, and from a musical point of view it was remarkably successful. To have such genuine artists as Mr. John Coates and Miss Carrie Tubb on the programme, supported by some of the best local talent, was an event of more than ordinary interest, and the audience were not slow to appreciate it. Mr. Coates and Miss Tubb were both very kind in responding to the many encores, and between them they furnished the major portion of the programme. Mr. Coates opened with the Liza Lehmann number, "Ah, moon of my delight," from "In a Persian Garden," and the high excellence to which he attained in his interpretation of this reflection of the Rubaiyat was maintained throughout. He was also notably effective in the excerpt from the first scene of the fourth act of "Romeo and Juliet"—"Nuit d'Hymenée"—(Gounod), in which Miss Tubb sang the Juliet music. It was altogether a fine vocal effort, and the audience were enthusiastic in their applause. Mr. Coates's other songs included "Come into the garden, Maud," and "Eleanore." Miss Tubb's songs included "Who is Sylvia?" "It was a lover and his lass," "Break of Day," "Songs my mother sang," "Our Lady, bless my brooms to-day," and "Shepherd Love." Mr. Coates and Miss Tubb were also down on the programme to take part in the quartet, "Un di si ben," from "Rigoletto," with Mr. Percy Whitehead and Miss Terry O'Connor. The two last-mentioned vocalists very creditably maintained their share in the entertainment. Miss O'Connor is a charming singer, and delighted everyone in her various songs, one of the most pleasing being a little fairy song which she sang as an encore. Mr. Percy Whitehead is so well known that it is sufficient to note that he was in splendid voice, and sang with all his customary charm and finish. His numerous "folk" songs were all admirably rendered. Variety was given to the programme by the violin solos of Mr. Patrick Delany, the 'cello solos of Miss Kathleen Andrews, and the humorous sketches by Mr. McHardy Flint. Miss Gertrude Cuolahan was the accompanist.

DUBLIN AND DISTRICT.

Bray Licence Transferred.—At Bray Petty Sessions on Saturday, on the application of Mr. Eastwood, solicitor, Mr. Patrick McGinn was granted a temporary transfer of the license held by Miss Mary Keenan, 46 Main street, Bray.

Sheep Worrying Case.—At Bray Petty Sessions on Saturday, the magistrates, by a majority, granted a decree of £2 to Michael Somers, Shankill, against William Wilmot, Phromptown, for the loss of a sheep. Somers said he found the defendant's dog eating the carcase on 22nd March. For the defence, it was stated that the plaintiff lost his sheep in January, and that the carcase found in March was not killed by the defendant's dog.

Heavy Fog in Irish Channel.—Fog banks at both the eastern and western sides of the Irish Channel yesterday morning interfered with the usual arrival times of steamers due in the Liffey with passengers and goods from ports in Great Britain. The London and North-Western Company's express steamer inwards yesterday morning from Holyhead to the Liffey was, it appears, twice "checked," or stopped, for brief periods during her run across the short sea route.

St. Vincent's Hospital.—In the Church of St. Andrew, Westland Row, at last Mass yesterday, the Rev. Ignatius McGrath, O.D.C., preached a special sermon in aid of St. Vincent's Hospital. In that hospital, he said, the public had a charity that had done its work in the alleviation of pain and suffering for over half a century. Never in the history of the hospital was an appeal more urgent made than that which he was now making. Owing to many circumstances the resources of the hospital were taxed to the utmost. When it was remembered that during the past year 1817 cases were treated in the wards of the institution, that in the dispensary 22,000 poor persons were treated, and that all were of a class who were unable to contribute anything towards the expenses, he believed the appeal would not pass unheeded. Were it not for the untiring labours of the medical staff, who gave their services free, and for those of the kind and sympathetic nurses, it would have been impossible for the Sisters of Charity to cope with the demands made upon them, particularly during the periods of epidemic.

PROVINCIAL PARAGRAPHS.

Belfast Prison Appointment.—Dr. H. O'Flaherty, who has been acting as medical officer to the Belfast Prison since the death of Dr. John Stewart, has been appointed to fill the vacancy.

Big Claim for Malicious Burning.—The Celbridge (No. 1) District Council have received notice of a claim for £9,020 for the malicious burning of flax and machinery at Cooltrim, Donadea.

Farm Labourers' Strike Collapses.—The farm labourers' strike in certain areas of County Down has collapsed, the farmers refusing to accede to the demand for 50/- for a shortened week, with an overtime scale.

Derry Recorder's Recovery.—His Honour Judge Todd, Recorder of Derry, who has been ill for some time, has now recovered, and on taking his seat at the Recorder's Court on Saturday was welcomed by the Bar.

Derry Coal Raid Sequel.—A sequel to the raid on coal dumps at Derry quay has been the lodging of a claim by Messrs. Macderette and Donnell, coal merchants, Londonderry, against the Corporation for £280.

Trim Hospital Appointment.—At a meeting of the Trim Board of Guardians on Saturday, Dr. O'Connell O'Reilly was unanimously elected to the positions of surgeon to the Trim Hospital and medical officer of the Trim Dispensary.

High-Priced Tipperary Land.—On Saturday at Thurles, a farm of about 145 Irish acres, situate at Knockagh, Templemore, without any residence on it, was sold by auction to Mrs. Harney, Whitefield, Templemore, for £10,120. This amount is exclusive of the usual fees, etc.

Belfast Boys' Brigade.—The annual inspection of the Belfast Boys' Brigade took place at Windsor Park, Belfast, on Saturday. The weather was glorious, and there was a big turnout of the various battalions. The inspecting officer was Brigadier-General Hacket-Pain, C.B., who complimented the lads on the proficiency displayed.

Serious Fire in Queenstown.—Yesterday a fire broke out in a cinema and dance hall at Lynch's quay, Queenstown, and before it was extinguished it extended to, and destroyed, other buildings, including several dwellinghouses both on the quay and at Harbour row, a much higher elevation of the town.

Dog Saves Child's Life.—A boy named John Shannon, aged five years, was saved from drowning in the river at Mulgrave's Bridge, Tralee, by a water spaniel owned by Mr. George Spiers, the Square. The dog seized the boy by the leg and brought him to the bank, where a number of people applied restoratives.

Tribute to Irish Coal.—The Resident Medical Superintendent of the Mullingar District Lunatic Asylum (Dr. Gavan) informed the Committee of Management on Saturday that he never saw better coal coming into the institution than that at present from the Wolfhill Colliery. The Chairman (Mr. E. A. Shaw) said that he was very agreeably surprised to note the fine quality of the coal.

Resident Magistrate's Appointment.—At the monthly meeting of the Banbridge Town Council a letter was received from Lieutenant R. W. Glass, solicitor to the Council, who was recently appointed as Resident Magistrate at Ballina, Co. Mayo, tendering his resignation as solicitor to the Council. Mr. Samuel Cunningham proposed a resolution, which was passed unanimously, congratulating Mr. Glass on his appointment, and wishing him a successful career.

ROYAL CITY OF DUBLIN HOSPITAL.

The usual monthly meeting of the Board of the Royal City of Dublin Hospital was held on Friday—Mr. William Mills Forsyth, J.P., in the chair. Also present:—Dr. Gibbon FitzGibbon, Mr. A. E. Goodbody, Right Hon. Sir William J. Goulding, Bart., P.C., D.L.; Mr. G. Jameson Johnston, F.R.C.S.; Dr. T. Gillman Moorhead, Mr. John Parkes, jun.; Dr. Alfred R. Parsons, Lt.-Col. Seton Pringle, R.A.M.C.; Mr. R. Atkinson Stoney, F.R.C.S.; Mr. Fane Vernon, D.L. Apologies for non-attendance were received from Mr. Richard W. Booth, J.P.; Mr. Henry Dudgeon, Mr. Richard K. Gamble, J.P.

The report of the Finance Committee for April was read, recommending for payment cheques amounting to £734 8/10. Cheques for same were drawn, which leaves the bank account £7,389 17/- overdrawn. It is earnestly hoped that subscribers who have not yet done so will kindly send in their contributions, as soon as possible, as the directors are anxious to reduce by every means in their power the above heavy overdraft. The Resident Medical Officer reported that 120 patients were admitted during the month; 606 accidents were treated; 1,051 attendances at the dispensaries; remaining in hospital 131. The Board regret that, owing to lack of funds, they have to limit the number of patients admitted. If the full work of the hospital is to be continued, it will be absolutely necessary to find a substantial increase of income, and the directors earnestly hope that the generous public will, as they have in times past, come to the rescue, and prevent them from having to reduce the available number of beds.

The directors noted with grateful thanks that the Dublin United Tramways Company have for this year agreed to give an additional subscription of £25, on account of the increased cost of the maintenance and administration of the hospital. The
